

RALPH MCGILL

Ignorance Is the Enemy

A few days ago a congressman spoke out about things scientific. And, since congressmen are fountainheads of wisdom, it may be profitable to examine his words.

He spoke of the recent testimony by scientists about the dangerous lag in this country's program in the field of ballistic missiles.

Now, we need to set the stage. The Secretary of Defense, Neil McElroy, has declared our backwardness in this field to be great and critical.

The President and the vice president have said so in the strongest of terms.

The Central Intelligence Agency, which is the United States secret intelligence force has just shocked a special Senate Committee with the revelation of just how great is our lag.

General James Doolittle, Commander of the 8th Air Force and the man who led the famous raid on Tokyo shortly after Pearl Harbor, has solemnly warned us of the danger.

There are, of course, others.

But the congressman was suspicious of the scientists for having delivered the bad news. He recalled there had been some question of the loyalty of a scientist or so. And he thought perhaps there might be another investigation of these men who are "running down our country."

Company

Now, this congressman is by no means a lonely figure in the Congress. He can always whistle up a number of his mentality for company. It is quite typical that of all those who have revealed our failure in the ballistic field, only the scientists were suspect. Here we have revealed one of the major reasons why educators and scientists are reluctant to enter government service. Many are willing to make the sacrifice of receiving less than half the financial return which may be had in business or private research. But they are not willing to be harassed and badgered about by little men.

We saw, during the McCarthy period when academic freedom came under attack, that there were those who, in order to save freedom, would destroy it or so reduce it as to render it meaningless. Men said, with truth, that the price of liberty is eternal vigilance. But, vigilance is by no means enough. We saw that it could serve tyrants as well as those who defended freedom. Dr. Alfred W. Griswold, president of Yale University, has recently developed this point in an article, "Freedom and Education."

Dr. Griswold believes that by failing to teach less and less of the liberal arts, we have slowly reduced the educational source of the concepts of freedom embodied in the Constitution.

"Ignorance," he said, "is the arch enemy of freedom. By neglecting our schools we have given it a new lease on life."

The congressman who thinks perhaps we should investigate the scientists is also fearful of federal aid to education.

Last month the U. S. Office of Education announced our total capital expenditures on education for the year 1955-56. It amounted to $15½ billion dollars.

The Record

Yet another set of figures, from the U. S. Bureau of the Census, shows that in the same period the nation spent $14½ billion on tobacco products and alcoholic beverages, $14½ billion on new and used automobiles and $13 billion on recreation.

If we go on into the spending on cosmetics, fishing equipment and sporting goods, the figures are equally revealing.

They bring us face to face with an inescapable fact.

It is: We can afford to do a great deal better by our educational system. The figures show conclusively we could allocate a much greater proportion of our national wealth to schools without denying ourselves any necessities and few of our luxuries.

Now that we know that Sputniks begin in classrooms — and in primary and secondary classrooms at that — perhaps we will do what is necessary. Shall we have gleaming skyscrapers and cars and a shortage of teachers?

There will always be enemies of education. There will always be congressmen who are suspicious of what they don't know.

But if we do not continue to educate for the whole man — as well as for science — we will fall prey to those mentalities which would restrict and intimidate academic freedom.

Traffic Toll Rises to 14 In Georgia

Two More Deaths Than Last Year

Georgia's traffic toll had climbed to 14 as the Thanksgiving holiday count ended at midnight Sunday, exceeding by three the estimate of the State Patrol.

Twelve highway deaths were registered in the four-day period last year.

Miss Ziprah Mendes, 71, retired Chatham County School teacher, was killed Sunday night as she was crossing a Savannah street. Mrs. Carol Berger, 24, wife of Rabbi Herbert M. Berger, who was walking with her, was hospitalized with injuries.

Police arrested a Savannah Negro whose license plate number was noted by a bystander who noted him returning to the scene several times.

Bernard Whitt Givens, 35, of Bainbridge, was killed Sunday when the car he was driving was struck by a freight train a mile south of Bainbridge on a county road.

TRAIN CAN'T STOP

Police Chief N. A. Martin said Givens stepped from the car and waved at the train but trainmen were unable to halt it.

An 18-year-old Alpharetta youth died Sunday of injuries received in the Saturday smashup which killed his brother, the Patrol said. He was Hulon Ray Barrett, of Rte. 3, Alpharetta, a passenger in a car that collided with a truck north of Roswell. Killed instantly in the wreck was Floyd Barrett, 22, also of Rte. 3, Alpharetta.

A Decatur resident, Robert Lee Mosley, of 4788 Stone Mountain Highway, Decatur, was killed Sunday when the car he was driving struck a tree on Indian Creek Drive in Clarkston, DeKalb County Police reported.

Other fatalities were Melvin Lavone Patterson, 17, Sugar Valley, fatally injured Saturday when his car overturned west of Calhoun; J. B. Griswold Jr., Decatur, killed Saturday when his car overturned near Buchanan; Lige Barfield, 69, Pineview, who died Saturday night in Macon of injuries received when he was struck by a car in downtown Macon.

HEAD-ON CRASH

James T. Cato, about 50, Berlin, killed in a head-on collision Saturday near Moultrie; Mrs. Laura Brown, 56, Mt. Airy, killed Friday when she was struck by an automobile in Mt. Airy; Elijah Patterson, 88, Union County, killed Friday when struck by a car near Blairsville; Jack Evans, 48, Gainesville, died Friday a few hours after being struck by a car on a Gainesville street; Susan Dianne Holder, 1, Warner Robins, killed Thursday when she was thrown from a car in a collision near Cochran; and Mrs. Effie English, Jacksonville, Fla., injured fatally in a collision near Brunswick Wednesday night.

Nation's Traffic Deaths Expected To Exceed 500

Traffic fatalities over the nation were expected to exceed 500 for the long Thanksgiving holiday weekend. The period ended at midnight Sunday, but many reports were expected to be late. The United Press had counted at least 495 traffic deaths Sunday night. There also were eight deaths in plane crashes and 92 from miscellaneous causes for an overall of 595.

Allies' Problems Put Premium On Ike's Ability To Wield Whip

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1—President Eisenhower's illness has produced two quite contradictory reactions in the capital. In fact, not since just before the Suez war have official and well-informed private opinion been so far apart.

The official news out of Gettysburg and the White House is reassuring; the President has made a remarkable recovery. A steady stream of photographs show him to be active, and a steady flow of announcements emphasize that he is again exercising "the powers and duties" of the presidency.

Meanwhile, Vice President Richard M. Nixon has emerged as official spokesman of the administration. He has participated in policy discussions more in the Budget-Cut Difficulties Are Rising

By EDWIN L. DALE JR.

(Copyright 1957 by New York Times Co.) WASHINGTON, Dec. 1—The administration is running up against almost insuperable obstacles in its search for major savings in the nondefense area of the budget.

President Eisenhower said in his Nov. 13 speech at Oklahoma City that he "reached a clear conclusion" that "entire categories of activities" should be cut out or deferred. He called this "one of the hardest and most distasteful tasks that the coming session of Congress must face."

LARGE PROGRAMS

As budget preparation proceeds, officials in and out of the Budget Bureau are discovering that non-defense activities of the government fall, in general, in two categories:

1. The large and expensive programs, in which even changes in basic legislation cannot produce significant savings in the next fiscal year.

2. A lot of minor programs which, even if some of them are cut out, add up relatively to "peanuts."

Outside of national security, there are only four billion-dollar programs in the government (not counting the highway program, which is self-financed and excluded from the budget):

SOIL BANK PROGRAM

1. Farm. The administration has already said it will propose authority to reduce price supports on the so-called "basic" crops from the present minimum of 75 per cent of parity. But even if Congress should pass such legislation, spending in fiscal 1959 would not be affected.

One of the few exceptions to the general rule about major items is the soil bank program. It could be continued on Page 18, Column 1

Winter To Lose Grip; 62 Is Expected Today

Old Man Winter was scheduled to loosen his tight grip on Georgia Monday as the Weatherman made a welcome prediction of fair and warmer.

Sunday temperatures, which slipped to 23.5, broke a 29-year-old mark for Atlanta. High Sunday afternoon was 53.

Tuesday's low is expected to be 44, quite a climb from the 32 low that Atlanta was to have Monday morning. Tuesday's high will be 62, the weatherman said, and it will be partly cloudy. Monday's high will be 62.

U.N. Chief Confers With Jordanians

Talks With Amman Leaders On Gasoline Transport Row

AMMAN, Jordan, Dec. 1 (U.P.)—U. N. Secretary General Dag Hammarskjöld began talks today aimed at heading off an open clash between Israel and Jordan—all over 490 gallons of gasoline.

"This thing could get that serious if it is not settled," said a spokesman for Hammarskjöld.

Israel is wrong and he appears determined to stand fast. Egypt and Syria have accused Rifai of being soft toward Israel.

Hammarskjöld sat down with Jordanian leaders to talk over the ticklish border situation within an hour after arriving from Beirut. He held a long session with 23-year-old King Hussein, two long meetings with Samir Rifai, deputy premier and foreign minister, and a short one with Premier Ibrahim Hashem. Hammarskjöld's aide said more talks will be held tomorrow.

Thus far, the U.N. secretary general apparently has found no inclination by Jordan to give ground.

SPECIFIC PROBLEMS

After four hours and 45 minutes of meetings, a communique was issued saying Hammarskjöld and the Jordanians discussed "problems relating to the strengthening of the position of the U.N. Truce Supervision Organization. The agenda was limited to specific problems connected with the UNTSO authority in areas under U.N. responsibility, particularly in the Mt. Scopus demilitarized area. Discussions will be resumed tomorrow morning." Jordan authorities gave Hammarskjöld a list of 21 alleged Israeli truce violations.

The Jordan government steadfastly refuses to permit an Israel convoy carrying 490 gallons of gasoline to pass through Jordan territory. The Jordanians maintain the gasoline falls in the classification of military supplies, which are prohibited from convoys supplying Israeli-held Mt. Scopus.

REFUSED TO AID

Moreover, the Jordanians have refused to cooperate with U. S. Marine Col. Byron Leary, acting chief of the truce supervision organization. Rifai has accused Leary of being prejudiced toward Israel and has demanded that Hammarskjöld fire him.

Jordan claims Israel is trying to transport gasoline to Mt. Scopus for military purposes. The Israelis maintain the gasoline is needed for an electric generator. The Israelis have occupied Scopus for nearly 10 years, since the end of the Palestine war. It is a low hill adjacent to the Arab-held Old City of Jerusalem entirely surrounded by Jordan territory. It is 900 feet long and 400 feet at its widest part.

HOSPITALITY UNIVERSITY

On the hill are Hadassah Hospital, the Hebrew University and an old German-built rest house. These were Jewish buildings long before the Palestine war.

Israel has been supplying men guarding the isolated buildings by convoys sent out once every two weeks. The Israelis encountered no trouble until the Jordanians found gasoline aboard—twice—and turned the convoys back.

Jordan officials say Hammarskjöld found Rifai adamantly refusing to back down either on the gasoline or Leary issues. The officials said Rifai firmly believes

Bid To Kill Sukarno Fatal to 10

137 in Hospital Most Are Children

By JAMES WILDE

JAKARTA, Indonesia, Dec. 1 (U.P.)—The death toll in last night's bloody attempt to assassinate President Sukarno with hand grenades rose to 10 today.

A government announcement said 137 persons in the crowd around the President last night were still in Jakarta Municipal Central Hospital for treatment of shrapnel wounds. Most of them are small children. Seven persons, including two children, were killed instantly.

PRESIDENT SAVED

Sukarno escaped unhurt as his bodyguards threw him to the ground, and covered his body.

Apart from a terse palace announcement and an "all's well" radio broadcast by Sukarno, there has been no official comment on the incident.

There was heavy censorship in Jakarta but travelers arriving in Singapore from the Indonesian capital said shooting broke out Sunday near the Cabinet building as the Indonesian Cabinet went into emergency session. There also were reports that government buildings and the Jakarta radio station were under guard of army tanks, armored cars and police with machine guns.

CONSEQUENCES FEARED

Government officials, expressed grave concern about possible consequences of the bombing. They declined, however, to discuss possible motives or the persons behind the incident. Military authorities have announced the arrest of two persons in connection with the grenade throwing but they have not been identified.

One usually reliable source said an examination of the fragments from the four grenades showed they were Western-made weapons with four-second fuses. They were thrown, apparently on signal from a pistol shot, as Sukarno moved through a crowd outside a public school in Tjikini. The President was taking part in the 15th anniversary of the school.

The national news agency Antara reported Sukarno's son Gunawan, 11, and his daughter, Megawati, 9, were in the official party but escaped injury. A heavy military guard was thrown around the school today. Traffic in the vicinity was normal.

Jeanette MacDonald Has Appendectomy

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (U.P.)—Actress Jeanette MacDonald underwent an emergency appendectomy at Georgetown University Hospital early today. Her condition was described as satisfactory.

A hospital spokesman said Miss MacDonald came through the surgery "just fine" and added that a normal recovery was expected.

The actress is best known for her motion picture singing roles with Nelson Eddy.

She was admitted to the hospital yesterday after having what her physician, Dr. James E. Fitzgerald, described as "vague abdominal discomfort."

Miss MacDonald was in Washington to attend the opening of a play in which her husband, Gene Raymond, is appearing.

Hurricane Skips Main Hawaii Isle

By CHARLES BERNARD

HONOLULU, Dec. 1 (U.P.)—Hurricane Nina, pushing out winds up to 100 miles an hour, bypassed heavily populated Oahu tonight and headed toward the island of Kauai, 96 miles away where it is expected to give 30,000 residents one of the worst rain-batterings in Hawaii's history.

An Air Force reconnaissance plane penetrated the hurricane this afternoon and reported its center "eye" had shifted slightly to the west. Trackers said Nina was now traveling at 13 miles an hour, a speedup over the previously reported 10 mph.

INCREASING FURY

The weather bureau said the center was now due west of Kauai and could be expected to begin battering the island with heavy winds at 8 p. m. HST (1 a. m. Monday EST), increasing in fury until 10 a. m. when they would average 50 to 75 miles an hour with gusts up to 100 mph.

However Hawaii's greatest danger appeared to be the heavy rains accompanying Nina, which were already forcing its valley rivers to run near flood level while storm-fed tides were running high along the south coast of the island.

On Oahu, where the great bulk of Hawaii's half million people live, the danger was over, according to the weather bureau, and the storm was losing its punch.

WARNINGS LOWERED

Storm warnings were lowered for the southernmost island of Hawaii, 200 miles south of Oahu, and similar action was expected for the other major islands in the chain except for Kauai.

No hurricane has hit any of the Hawaiian islands in recorded history although one came close to Kauai in 1950 and Nina was expected to come within 80 miles of the island, which might be the closest one ever got.

1,008 Top Firms Tied To 135 Finance Units

Sharing of Directors, Officers Is Surveyed by House Committee

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (U.P.)—The House Small Business Committee today released a report saying that 135 of the nation's largest financial institutions have a direct voice in the affairs of more than 1,000 of the biggest U.S. business firms.

The committee said a mutual policymaking relationship among top financial and business interests is created through interlocking directorships or officerships—that is, by having directors or officers common to a number of firms.

$168 BILLION

The 135 financial institutions were said to have assets in excess of $168 billion dollars.

"With only one exception," the committee said, "all of the 135 top financial companies were found to share one or more officers or directors with other large firms in the financial, commercial and utility fields."

"Of these 135 top financial companies, 107 share directors or officers with at least one other company in the group of 135."

1,008 FIRMS

"Altogether, the 135 financial companies had interlocking directors or officers with 1,008 firms out of the 1,700 large firms for which lists of officers and directors were examined."

The committee report was labeled "preliminary," and contained no conclusions or recommendations.

It was compiled for use in the committee's study of the financing problems of small business. In recent hearings, Chairman Patman (D-Tex.) charged big business with "freezing out" small business competitors through control of financing funds.

35 COMMERCIAL BANKS

The committee report listed the 135 companies as including the 35 largest commercial banks, 20 largest mutual savings banks, 20 largest life insurance companies, 20 largest fire and casualty insurance companies, 20 largest investment banking firms and 20 largest investment trusts.

These firms are the largest source of direct business financing.

In an extensive listing of companies having some officers or directors in common with at least one of the 135 financial companies, the report showed American Telephone & Telegraph Co. had the greatest number of "interlocks" with 50. The Pennsylvania Railroad was next with 30.

Among the banks, and third in all categories, the Chase Manhattan Bank of New York ranked first with 23 "interlocks."

General Electric, United States Steel, and Westinghouse Electric led the manufacturing companies.

Supplying West Europe With A-Weapons Means Building Tension, Kennan Says

By THOMAS P. RONAN

(Copyright 1957 by New York Times Co.)
LONDON, Dec. 1—George F. Kennan asserted tonight that the existing military tension in Europe would be seriously increased if western continental nations were supplied with strategic or tactical atomic weapons.

This move would be bound to raise a grave problem for the Russians with regard to their own military dispositions and their relations with the other Warsaw pact powers, he said.

The former United States ambassador to Moscow said it also would inevitably bring about a further complication of the German and satellite problems. "Moscow is not going to be inclined to entrust its satellites with full control over these weapons," he continued.

RED WITHDRAWAL

"If, therefore, the Western Continental countries are to be armed with them, any Russian withdrawal from Central and Eastern Europe may become unthinkable for once and all, regardless of what the major Western powers might be prepared to do."

Kennan, who is professor of history at the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton, was delivering the fourth in a series of British Broadcasting Corp. talks. He is lecturing during the present academic year at Oxford University.

Secretary of State Dulles has suggested that atomic warheads might be stockpiled in Europe and that 1,500-mile missiles might be supplied to other Western nations in addition to Britain. The U.S. already has agreed to supply these missiles to Britain, the only other Western nuclear power.

DULLES' PROPOSAL

Kennan did not mention the Dulles proposal but he said that the "danger" that tactical atomic weapons might be supplied Western Continental nations was "a very imminent one as things now stand."

The Dulles proposal is expected to be discussed at the NATO top-level meeting in Paris this month.

Kennan said it was obvious that the larger the number of hands into which the control over atomic weapons was placed, "the smaller would be the possibility for their eventual exclusion from national arsenals by international agreement."

It would also be more difficult "to preclude complications of all sorts," he said.

Placing these weapons in the hands of a number of countries in addition to the three present nuclear powers was "practically to assure that there can in future be no minor difficulty in Europe that does not at once develop into a major one," he said.

Noting that the Russians also had warned against giving tactical atomic weapons to continental countries, he said that ideas must not be rejected "just because they happen to coincide with ones put forward on the other side."

Kennan, whose subject was the military aspect of the West's conflict with Soviet power, argued that the atomic weapons race meant that nations were confronted with the greatest danger in history.

Traffic Flow Vital To City Heartbeat

The Metropolitan Planning Commission's report on factors pertaining to Atlanta's downtown growth is, for the most part, highly encouraging.

During the past four years the core area added 739,000 square feet of business and office space. New buildings have replaced outmoded, unsightly structures in many instances.

Creation of more than a million square feet of off-street parking facilities came in for particular praise in the report. Most of it occurred on perimeter circulation streets instead of in the heart of the sector, a fact which contributes enormously to maintaining a flow of vehicles in the central area.

Traffic congestion comprises the greatest threat to future development of downtown Atlanta. Already there are approximately 3,300 more employees in the central business district than in 1953. Due to increased population, the trend toward more employees, shoppers and visitors to the core area will increase despite the successful operations of shopping centers in outlying areas.

But the main bottleneck will be movement of vehicles. The Automobile Manufacturers Assn. has reported that in Fulton and DeKalb counties there is a passenger car for every 3.3 persons and each family owns an average of 1.1 automobiles. And, unfortunately, it is not unusual during rush hours to see as many as 10 automobiles in a row at Five Points with each containing only its driver.

The principal solutions to the problem include a greatly increased use of public transit, adding new areas to the ban on street parking and seeing that enforcement is rigid and on a 24-hour basis. Furthermore, the new rule against left turns at certain intersections must be extended to other busy crossings wherever feasible.

As disagreeable as the changes may be to a few motorists, Atlanta must adopt them to prevent the flow of vehicles from lapsing back to the snail's pace of buggy travel in the days of Marthasville.

Tech Wins Distinction In Research Programs

The announcement that Georgia Tech ranks as the South's largest and the nation's 10th largest research organization among the 114 universities and colleges who are members of the Engineering and Research Council is a splendid recognition of the work going on at this institution.

The school carried out 40 per cent of all engineering research done by the 16 member institutions in the Southeast. Total invested in such projects added up to $2,250,000, fifth largest of state-supported schools.

The high ranking was made possible by more than $1,950,000 in research development projects sponsored by industry and government through the Georgia Tech Engineering Experiment Station. This would not have been possible, however, except for the school's ability to carry out these programs through capable personnel and necessary equipment.

It should be pointed out that some of the projects, including work in ceramics, are related to national defense programs. Nuclear science and engineering is becoming of increasing importance. After the approved atomic reactor is built, contributions in this field will have no peer in the South.

We are pleased that Tech is maintaining its fine reputation and standards in research. Its potential in that field should be supported to the hilt by government and industry. As we have seen demonstrated recently, the future belongs to science and to the nation which proceeds most rapidly with its basic research programs.

This Atlanta Teen-Ager Makes Us Feel Proud

The Constitution takes considerable pride in extending congratulations to Brown High senior Donald Thompson.

The young Atlantan has won one of five college scholarships awarded by the Ford Motor Co. following its national teen-age press conference in Dearborn, Mich. He represented The Constitution at the conference.

Donald's achievement is no mean feat. He competed with 150 students from throughout the country in news writing and reporting and in digging up stories about the industry. The entries were judged by leading experts without knowing the names of the contestants or the papers they represented.

Not only is young Mr. Thompson to be congratulated for winning the $800 scholarship but for his equally impressive record as a student. He is cartoonist for his school publication, is a member of the Beta and Key Clubs, is president of his

Sunday School class and secretary of the Baptist Training Union at the West End Baptist Church. In addition, he finds time to work after school and on Saturdays in a shoe store.

In this day when the nation needs to develop all of its superior talent, this opportunity for Donald Thompson is an example of how it can be done. We are proud of his recognition and of Ford Motor Co. for sponsoring this worthwhile project.

Ike's Hand Is Needed For Congress Session

President Dwight D. Eisenhower is resting at his farm near Gettysburg. And he is thinking. He is a soldier, used to doing his duty and not unaccustomed to danger. It is extremely unlikely he will, as he rests, give much consideration to his personal wishes, feelings or future. To those who advise him that to continue in office might be to shorten his life, he might privately reply that this is unimportant.

He will consider all the factors as he recuperates. There is certainly a possibility he will, later on, retire.

But there is now no reason for the President to resign.

There are many valid reasons why he should not.

There has been set up a sort of executive committee. It includes the vice president, Sherman Adams, assistant to the President, and other undesignated staff members. This committee will call in, as it needs it, the services of any Cabinet member whose assistance may be required.

Its decisions or conclusions will then be handed to the President. The somewhat understandable, if irritating, "everything is just fine" attitude of the medical staffs should not be allowed to overshadow the fact that any person who has had even a mild stroke is not again going to be able to carry as much load as before. But the President, during the weeks ahead, barring any unexpected worsening of his condition, will be fully able to handle such work as the committee will bring him.

It is important, we think, that the President, if he should determine his condition indicates resignation, not do so until after the next session of the Congress has accomplished most of its important business.

His integrity, prestige and presence is needed for a session which will be, at best, riddled with personal politics, especially on the part of the House members, all of whom are up for re-election.

The Constitution of the United States does not need any changes with regard to the presidential succession. It is plain enough. It says that if the President is removed, resigns or is physically unable to continue, the duties shall devolve upon the vice president. Note the word shall.

So we trust Mr. Eisenhower will continue to improve.

And that whatever his ultimate decision, he give no thought to resignation until the next Congress has done its job.

Insurance Executive Points to Hard Facts

A recent letter from the president of one of the nation's large insurance firms to all its agents indicates the seriousness and some of the consequences of the mounting number of automobile accidents.

He said that all classes of automobile insurance business were unprofitable for the industry as a whole in 1956.

"In spite of substantial rate increases since the first of the year on most classes and in practically all states," he continued, "the results in 1957 continue very unsatisfactory and in many territories worse than last year."

"The continued high loss ratio is due principally to high frequency, continued inflation and unreasonable and excessive demands by claimants resulting in high court verdicts. Unless and until there is a decided improvement, rates will continue to go up even though they are at an all-time high at the present time."

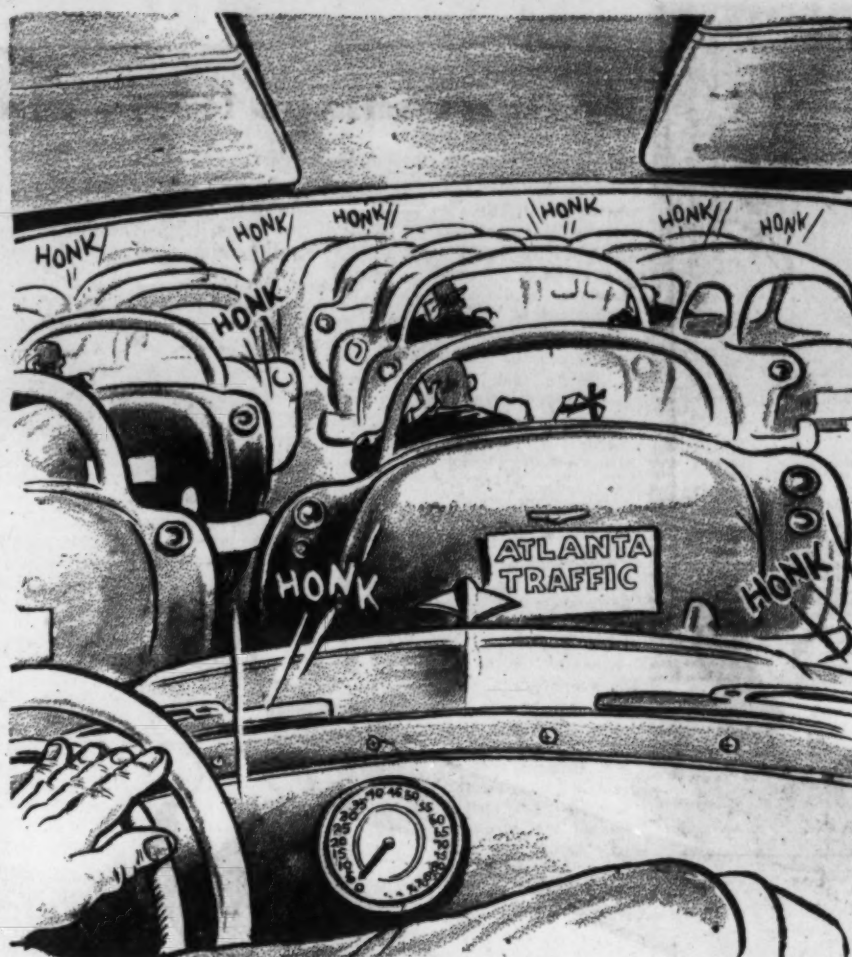

As a result, he has instructed agents to avoid undesirable risks, both new and renewal.

Furthermore, he advised agents to render every assistance toward improved traffic regulations and enforcement in their respective communities.

His letter affords a clear insight into some of the ways the public must pick up the tab for the damage caused by irresponsible law violators on the highways. It amounts to millions of dollars annually in addition to what, of course, is the most appalling cost of all—the loss of human lives.

Atlantan Charges Lack of Encouragement Is Reason So Few Students Take Science

Atlanta—Now there is such a hue and cry about the need for young scientists, etc., you might be interested in how the Atlanta Board of Education feels about this subject.

I have a child who is a senior at an Atlanta high school. During the freshman and sophomore years he was out of school quite a bit due to illness. In spite of this his report card for the sophomore year showed a B in French, science, English and social studies and a C in algebra. Both his science and French teachers told him the B was a B-plus and that with a tiny bit more effort he would have received an A. He put down his electives for the junior year and included geometry and chemistry.

During summer vacation we got a telephone call from the school advising that inasmuch as he had a C average he could not take five book subjects and would have to drop one of his

Editor's Note: This letter is longer than we ordinarily use but since it expresses the consensus of a number of others, we waived our rule about brevity. Certainly it expresses some of the real reasons for the lag in science in our schools.

electives — either chemistry or geometry. I questioned the fact of a C average since he had one C only and tried to explain to the teacher calling that two of the B's were B-plus, but to no avail. Four B's plus one C made a C average and that was that—no chemistry was out.

In his junior year he had a history teacher who insisted on an average of over 93 for A. From 87 to 92 was B. He made 91 and got B. From this I discovered that the grade depends, of course, largely on what the child makes but also on how the teacher decides to give out A's, B's, etc. A child getting a 90 average from one teacher would get an A, whereas another getting a 91 or 92 from still another teacher would get a B.

This year he gave up the idea of chemistry and elected to take physics instead. He is making A in this subject.

His aim is and has been for several years to teach school. He is truly interested in becoming a physics teacher; however, if he does become a science or physics teacher it certainly won't be due to any cooperation or encouragement from his school. The teachers are there ready to teach, the books are there and the laboratories, but the encouragement is lacking. Ask any high school kid about "crip" courses that push a student through on the easiest possible road, yet give him the same diploma as those who take the hard road.

It seems to me if a Board of Education is going to stand on a straight A, B, C, etc., system of report cards some definite guide should be set—not let each teacher grade according to his own whim. And if a child wants to tackle chemistry or physics I think he should at least be allowed to make a try. If he fails, at least he tried—and who knows—he might not fail. It is quite possible he might make a not too imposing grade in English or history and yet come up with a high 90 average in the sciences.

At least let's give the kids a chance at 'em. It is easy to understand why more Atlanta students don't take science courses.

Georgian Criticizes Ministers' Manifesto

Atlanta—Too many smart lads who know how to write excellent compositions write discussing Bible subjects of which they are ignorant. The most recent one is Lady Vera Timm, who also wants to be a profit (sic), saying the ministers' manifesto will become brighter. It does not even have the reputation of being bright yet. Neither did she cite any Scriptures to prove it. But she only proved her own ignorance.

SEATTLE CITIZEN HAS ANSWERS FOR DULLES

Seattle, Wash. — We see Ike is getting set to ask Congress to remove the 275-billion-dollar debt ceiling and grant another two or three or whatever billions of the taxpayers' money that may be required for his new missile man to build and launch a bigger and better Sputnik than the present Russian model—one that will project a man or even a regiment of men to cruise in outer space, instead of a little poach.

And since the Russians apparently got all the secrets of their Sputnik I and II from us to begin with, and will probably get whatever other technique we may later on develop in the same silly manner, if and when we finally produce a mechanism by which to fly to the moon, we should certainly see to it that our dear, dear friends behind the Kremlin walls are properly supplied with all the mechanical details of our newer American version and the proper designs and formula so they may never lag in the race to conquer the sky.

Let's resolve to turn over a new leaf right here and now in our policy of international largess and let the Reds and the so-called backward nations help themselves to the gravy. In that event the nations of the world might really come to love us... and we certainly need their love. Dulles should have thought of this a long, long time ago.

Perverted Mouthings Of Sex Films Ripped

Emory University — The majority of American youth are seeking and finding a wholesome, creative outlet for the turbulence which biological maturity inevitably produces during teenage. An almost unlimited number of clubs and religious groups in almost every city are constantly providing outlets in amusement and entertainment designed to promote healthy bodies and minds. Millions of teen-agers utilize these outlets to advantage.

Meanwhile, Hollywood is to be congratulated on its most recent no-able contribution to the exploitation of sex by a sensational appeal to the lower appetites of youth. I refer to the movie "Eighteen and Anxious." The newspaper advertising of the movie assumes that adults will protest but that youth will "understand." Youth today does not need the perverted mouthings of a degenerate sex philosophy to realize that all it takes to exploit the animal instinct is to "let yourself go."

What a decisive contribution the film industry could make toward strengthening the moral fiber of tomorrow's society by just occasionally espousing a theme which would advocate to youth the need of "pulling themselves together." Most youth are looking for the latter.

Point No. 9, Drive With Care

For Sunday's paper I told about the Atlanta tourist hunting the way to "Happyville," his pronunciation for Hapeville. Up in Wisconsin, there lived a man who thought he knew the way to that first place. He was a small-town doctor.

In 1949 he made a speech on "How to Live to 100 Happily." The speech grew into a radio program, then into a lecture circuit. It became a book and series of syndicated articles appearing in 300 newspapers.

The way to happiness, this doctor advised, was through making the attitude and the thinking as cheerful and pleasant as possible.

He gave detailed directions, eight points to go with that thinking: Don't analyze your feelings constantly; learn to like work; take up a hobby; learn to like people; learn to be satisfied; learn to accept adversity; learn to say the cheerful, humorous thing, and learn to meet your problems with decision.

"That's it, folks. That's happiness," the man said. "That's the way to be happy while you live to be 100."

The man was Dr. John A. Schindler, author of "How to Live 365 Days a Year" and "Woman's Guide to Better Living," which ran serially in The Atlanta Constitution.

Dr. Schindler died a few days ago when the car he was driving struck a bridge abutment as he was returning from a house call. Ironically, the series in The Constitution ended the day the author was killed.

He missed living to 100 by 46 years.

He had written, "The mature attitude recognizes first that certain true dangers exist in ordinary living such as ill health, auto accidents, fire and so on and then takes a reasonable precaution to avoid them."

Folks who haven't got around to reading his "How to Live 365 Days a Year" with its eight directions for happiness would do well to start by memorizing that one paragraph.

The Young Woman Had Real Trouble

At the airport down in Jacksonville the other Saturday morning there were no less than 50 of us with tickets to the Tech-Florida football game. The plane was due to leave at 11 o'clock and would put us into Atlanta in plenty of time for the kickoff. It was a gay, happy group of people.

I had spoken in Jacksonville the night before and those Florida people were eagerly telling me about how badly Tech was going to get beat. Naturally I stood up for my hometown team.

Our plane came in on schedule and we were all lined up ready to get aboard. Then came an announcement that there would be a 30-minute delay due to mechanical trouble. That was all right as we had plenty of time. But the second 30-minute delay began to worry us a bit. Then the delay stretched beyond the hour.

We began to realize that we likely would miss the game. Those happy people began to get unhappy. Tempers began to show. When a football fan has tickets for the game in his pocket and is facing the prospect of missing the game, he becomes difficult to deal with. Harsh words were beginning to fill the air. I wasn't too happy myself. I knew Mama was waiting for me at the airport. I got her on the phone to tell her to go on to the game without me.

About that time one of the airline officials came over to me and said, "Would you mind talking with that girl sitting over there?" I went and sat down by her and told her who I am. She needed someone to talk with.

Through her tears she told me her story.

She is 19 years old, has been married about a year and is expecting a baby within a few weeks. Her husband was in the Air Force stationed at Valdosta. He had not been feeling well for two or three days but the doctors thought it was nothing serious. Then suddenly the night before he had died. She was heartbroken, lonely and afraid. She was by herself on her way back home to a little town in Kentucky. They were shipping his body back.

As I talked with that little girl, the football game was forgotten. I was ashamed that I had even let the thought of missing the game bother me. Here was a little girl who had really lost something. Soon there would be a baby who would be missing a daddy. Instead of complaining about the slight interruption in my own plans, I sympathized with her in her much greater interruption in life.

We are so prone to complain and be unhappy over some little trouble that comes our way. But if we will only look around and see how much greater has been someone else's loss and, if instead of thinking only of ourselves, we try to lift the burden of another's heart we will forget our own troubles.

Roscoe Drummond

It's Catch Up Fast Or Face Oblivion

WASHINGTON—The greatest need in the United States today, I am convinced, is to steel our minds against accepting the dangerous soporific that just a little extra effort will enable us to catch up with the Soviets in science and in weapons. Today and tomorrow, next month and the next there will be many temptations to believe that with a few scholarships here, an extra half-billion appropriation there and a missile "czar" somewhere else, everything will be in good shape.

There will be pressures from many directions operating on Congress, operating on the President, operating on all of us, coolly advising us not to get panicky, not to go off the deep end and to remember that we've always come out all right in the past.

I cannot escape the conviction that the overriding need today is to shield ourselves from these temptations and to resist these pressures.

The danger is not that we will become panicky. The danger is that we will accept something "almost" good enough to catch up with the Soviets so that in the end we will almost catch up almost fast enough.

There is no such thing as "almost" doing enough; there is no such thing as "almost" catching up to the Soviets; this is the kind of challenge in which there is no such thing as "almost" winning. You win—or you lose for keeps.

This is why the Senate Preparedness Subcommittee investigation of the missile program is useful.

Probably the testimony will stress far more what's gone wrong rather than what's gone

Not a Single 'New,' Then Ike's 'Chill'

Leroy (Flash) Niles, chief copy boy of The Constitution, was leaning against the telegraph editor's desk idly twirling a photograph someone had asked him to run somewhere. Leroy had just rendered an opinion the Boston Dead Sox would capture the American League pennant next year, an hallucination indulged in annually by Mr. Niles, who has been with the paper since the time of the Boer War. An assistant in the copy boy corps was regarding the row of teletype machines and wondering how much longer he could let them run without cutting the copy.

The city editor, Howell Jones, had just informed Mr. Niles that the New York Yankees were unbeatable, a position consistently held by Mr. Jones.

It was the middle of the afternoon and the news was routine. Then came word the President's chill was not really a chill and the afternoon wasn't routine any more. The wire services, at first, were rather confused about the extent of the President's illness. This situation came about because Mrs. Anne Wheaton, an assistant White House press secretary, was confused. She initially stated that the President's attack had been concerned with the heart. Later, clarification set in and it became apparent Eisenhower had suffered a small stroke.

Meanwhile, back at the news desk DuPont Smith was mulling over the front page layout and the paper's executives decided they would increase the size of the morning paper by two pages to take care of added copy which would be forthcoming. A team of specialists was examining the President, the wire services said, and their report would come along later. Until then, one couldn't be sure about the extent of the Chief Executive's illness.

Associated Press Wirephoto was busy bringing in pictures from Washington, and The Constitution's Reference Room (known as The Morgue in all newspaper offices in less dainty days) had sent to the newsroom pictures of Ike and Mamie made during their recent visit to Georgia.

Editor Ralph McGill, along with other staff members, was hanging over the teletype machines awaiting further word on the President's condition and Mr. McGill let the composing room know he'd have a substitute page one column for the morning edition.

Mr. Niles, meantime, had carried the picture to where it was supposed to go. The city-side staff was busy interviewing people on and off the street to get response to the President's illness. (Everyone regretted it.) Doctors were being polled to get their opinions. All together, the office was a totally different place than it had been a few moments before. And that's the way it is in the newspaper business... one minute you haven't got a single "new" and the next minute you're working your head to the bone.

IMPROMPTU GEYSER—This chilly fountain erupted in a vacant lot on Tree Haven Dr., NE, Sunday afternoon as a water main broke. The geyser lasted about 30 minutes—until the water department cut the water off. Child in foreground is entranced by spray reaching 40 or 50 feet into the air. The residents of the 4400 block on Tree Haven drive were treated with a continuous rainbow while the geyser lasted, but cared nothing for a possible repeat performance in weather as cold as Sunday's.

Atom Industry Is Second In Safety, Expert Says

By FRANK WELLS

The nuclear energy industry is the second safest industry in the country, Dr. Marshall H. Bruer, director of the medical division at the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies, said in Atlanta Sunday night.

Dr. Bruer said that the safest industry is of all things, the girdle making industry.

"We have perhaps been over-cautious in the atomic industry," Dr. Bruer said. "Last year there were 36 deaths in this country just from the misuse of aspirin. There was not a single death attributable to radiation."

Dr. Bruer was in Atlanta to speak to the State Nuclear Advisory Commission Monday at Georgia Tech. He will speak on "Responsibilities of the Medical Profession and Public Health Services in the Use and Control of Nuclear Radiation."

Dr. Bruer said that there is no reason for the general public to ever fear a nuclear reactor such as the one which will be installed at Georgia Tech.

"There is radiation in dangerous amounts created in such a reactor, but the safety controls are so rigid, that there is no danger that anyone will be hurt by them," the atomic energy physician said.

Dr. Bruer said that Tech's reactor will serve its greatest purpose by teaching young engineers how to run such reactors. He said that there would always be a need for men with such training.

Dr. Bruer discounted the arguments of some geneticists that radiation from atomic fall-out and numerous X-rays is reaching or may some time reach a danger point.

"They talk about the rate of mutation being doubled, but they don't say anything about what the original rate was," the scientist said. "The average individual has nothing to fear from any kind of radiation, particularly the small amounts he gets in X-rays for diagnostic purposes. If you are talking about the fall-out from an atomic bomb burst directly overhead, I don't know, but then you won't have to worry about it."

Dr. Bruer said that in all of the post-war births in Nagasaki and Hiroshima, Japanese targets for our two atomic bombs, there had been no significant changes. He said that scientists had to say that their observations were "inconclusive" as to any mutative

U.S. Aid Slash Causes Korean Gasoline Deficit

SEOUL, Dec. 1 (U)—South Koreans began feeling the effect of a substantial cut in United States aid to Korea as a gasoline shortage this weekend stranded an estimated third of the nation's 27,000 cars.

Funds for gasoline import that amounted to 20 million dollars yearly have been slashed by three million as part of a government austerity drive.

BELLY TO BALLET

No-Dancing Law Urged By Moslem

CAIRO, Dec. 1 (U)—An Egyptian member of Parliament has proposed a law banning all public dancing, from belly dances to ballet, and calling for strict segregation of the sexes in school, at movies and on the beaches.

Deputy Abdel Rehim el Kadi said dancing was contrary to Moslem principles and traditions.

He said his proposed law would set up separate educational facilities for women and forbid them to enter the fields of science, law and engineering. Only nursing and medical courses would be open to the women.

El Kadi proposed afternoon movie sessions for women only, with evening performances reserved for men.

Brandt, speaking to Berlin residents in his weekly broadcast, said the news of the President's illness was received here with "concern and consternation."

200 Seek 2 Hunters Lost in Bartow Area

CARTERSVILLE, Dec. 1—About 200 persons from four counties called off at dusk Sunday the second day of search for two missing Atlanta area duck hunters who disappeared on the Etowah River Friday.

The search will resume Monday morning.

Joining in the day-long hunt Sunday were two National Guard planes, a civilian plane, rescue squads from Cobb and Gordon counties, a National Guard company from Rome and scores of civilian volunteers.

The only sign found thus far is a paddle used by the missing men, Earl Rich, 35, of 106 Adams Dr., Smyrna, and Albert O'Shield, 24, of a Holly street address in Atlanta.

The three airplanes were unable to spot a boat reportedly seen several miles downstream from where Rich and O'Shield launched theirs on the Etowah at Ga. 113 and Ga. 61 near Cartersville.

Withdrawal Unexplained By Jenner

BEDFORD, Ind., Dec. 1 (U)—Sen. William E. Jenner (R-Ind.) said today he has no intention of expanding on yesterday's terse statement of withdrawal as a candidate for re-election next year.

"There are many reasons," Jenner told The Associated Press. "Most of the reasons are personal. At any rate, they're all mine. Some might be misunderstood if I elaborated on the statement."

The junior Hoosier senator said in his unexpected announcement, released through GOP State Chairman Robert W. Matthews, that he intends to practice law in Indianapolis. He has served in the Senate since 1944.

Jenner was in excellent spirits at his Bedford home, getting ready to leave on a two- or three-day quail-hunting trip.

He laughed when asked if he knew of any Indiana senator in the past who gave up the office voluntarily, while in good health, and with renomination virtually certain.

"No," Jenner said, "I don't think it has ever happened before and it may never happen again."

Ga. Florist Disappears From Boat

BRUNSWICK, Dec. 1 (U)—Ralph McConnell, 34-year-old Douglas florist, apparently fell from a fast boat near here today. Searchers were unable to find him.

McConnell was last seen seated in a deck chair in the rear of an 18-foot outboard boat somewhere near the St. Simons Island marina.

He was a passenger in the boat driven by Jack O'Grady, Douglas. A third occupant was Howard Roberts, Brunswick auto salesman, formerly of Douglas.

It is presumed McConnell stood up and fell overboard as the boat maneuvered in the intercoastal waterways. The occupants of the boat said they do not know exactly when he disappeared.

They were following a boat occupied by Dr. Calvin Meeks and Robert Cowart, also of Douglas. Neither of them was able to offer any explanation as to McConnell's disappearance.

The Coast Guard and a large number of individual boat owners conducted a fruitless search.

Science Shrinks Piles New Way Without Surgery

Finds Healing Substance That Does Both—Relieves Pain—Shrinks Hemorrhoids

New York, N. Y. (Special)—For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the astonishing ability to shrink hemorrhoids and to relieve pain—without surgery.

In one hemorrhoid case after another, "very striking improvement" was reported and verified by doctors' observations.

Pain was relieved promptly. And, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most amazing of all—this improvement was maintained in cases where doctors' observations were continued over a period of many months!

In fact, results were so thorough that sufferers were able to make such astonishing statements as "Piles have ceased to be a problem!" And among these sufferers were a very wide variety of hemorrhoid conditions, some of 10 to 20 years' standing.

All this, without the use of narcotics, anesthetics or astringents of any kind. The secret is a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne*)—the discovery of a world-famous research institution. Already, Bio-Dyne is in wide use for healing injured tissue on all parts of the body.

This new healing substance is offered in suppository or ointment form called Preparation H.* Ask for individually sealed convenient Preparation H suppositories or Preparation H ointment with special applicator. Preparation H is sold at all drug stores. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

Ike Is Returning Today To Preside Over Cabinet

President would be able to attend the Paris sessions set for Dec. 16, 17 and 18. The President is still anxious to attend.

The cabinet meeting originally had been called for 9 a.m. tomorrow with Vice President Nixon presiding. It was postponed until 2:30 p.m. when the President made known his desire to participate, at least briefly. The group is at the final decision stage on a number of important policy questions relating to national defense, the size of next year's budget, and the legislative program to be presented to the new congress in January.

Administration planning on these points will be disclosed in general terms to the bipartisan group meeting on foreign policy issues Tuesday, and to a meeting of Republican leaders alone on domestic issues the following day. The President gave renewed evidence of his quick recuperative powers today as he drove for 40 minutes across a section of the Gettysburg battlefield and visited a small country store and slaughter house where two of his steers were slaughtered three weeks ago.

He was accompanied on this drive by two of his Gettysburg neighbors and partners in his farming operations, Brig. Gen. Arthur S. Nevins, retired, and George E. Allen, Washington businessman. They were followed in another car by Hagerly and the President's personal physician, Dr. Howard McC. Snyder, who returned last night from Washington where he had gone to visit an ailing sister, Mrs. Claude L. Draper.

Allen, who had won a number of small bets Saturday by backing Navy in its 14-10 triumph over Army, "needed" the Army backers, including the President, who feigned despair over the defeat of his alma mater.

It was a clear sunny day with the mercury at 32, and the President was bundled in a heavy blue overcoat as he drove across the battlefield. He did not leave his car except at "Lower's Country Store," about seven miles from his farm. He stayed there about 10 minutes.

Dr. Snyder said the President had another good night's sleep and that "his progress continues excellent."

On his final afternoon at the farm, the President enjoyed another session with his four grandchildren and their parents, Maj. and Mrs. John S. Eisenhower.

WINSTON AND SIR WINSTON—WESTERHAM, England, Dec. 1.—Sir Winston Churchill and his grandson, Winston, son of Randolph, stand together at the former Prime Minister's home here. Sir Winston was 83 Saturday.

Knowland Says Ike Can Judge Fitness

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (AP)—Sen. Knowland (R-Calif.) said today there is no reason for President Eisenhower to resign. But Knowland added that Congress must face up to the problem of presidential disability.

Knowland, the Senate Republican leader, said in an interview he thinks Eisenhower is perfectly capable of judging his own ability to continue his duties despite the slight stroke he suffered last Monday.

"The President is the judge of his capabilities," Knowland said. "I am sure he would not continue to carry on the burdens of his office unless he felt fully capable of doing so."

NEED CLARITY

"But it is time for Congress to face up to the need for clarification of the succession problem. I hope the administration will renew its recommendations in this field and, if it does not, that Congress will be prepared to come up with some alternative proposals."

Knowland said that in his judgment, Vice President Nixon "acted with circumspection" in making himself helpful in the President's illness without making any move to "take over." Nixon and Knowland are regarded in some quarters as possible opponents for the 1960 Republican presidential nomination.

BROWNELL'S VIEW

The Constitution says the vice president shall take over the duties of the presidency when the president is incapable of fulfilling them. But it is silent on how presidential disability may be determined and how the decision shall be made on the termination of that disability.

Former Atty. Gen. Herbert Brownell told Congress last year it was his interpretation that the Constitution left the determination of both questions up to the vice president.

Atty. Gen. William P. Rogers ruled informally at the White House last week, after conferring with Eisenhower's doctors, that there was no necessity for any delegation of presidential power.

The administration proposed last year that the president be designated, when he is able, to determine his inability to carry on. If a president were unconscious or deranged, the cabinet could, at the call of the vice president, decide by a majority vote when the president was unable to carry on and could return him to office when he recovered.

It was Brownell's view that any new system of determining presidential incapacity would have to be inaugurated by a constitutional amendment. Such an amendment would require two-thirds approval of those voting in both houses of Congress and ratification by three-fourths of the states.

the Blue Ridge, shivered when their unofficial thermometers registered 12 Sunday morning. Light snow powdered the mountains around Ellijay Saturday and there were reports of flurries of snow in Dalton and other north Georgia towns.

Every point in the state reported sub-freezing temperatures Sunday, the Atlanta Weather Bureau reported, but Albany had the "warmest" low—31.

There was no sudden drop in temperatures Saturday although it felt like it, the weatherman said, something like "It isn't the heat but the humidity."

The biggest drop of temperatures in any one hour Saturday was between 10 and 11 a.m. with a six-degree fall. But the amount of moisture in the air declined from 76 per cent at 1 p.m. to 46 per cent at 5 p.m.

"That and the bitter wind from the north made it feel so cold," the weatherman said.

The winds reached their peak at 3:36 p.m. Saturday when a gust of 42 miles an hour was measured. The winds, caused by the difference of temperatures of air at the ground and aloft, toppled tree limbs across many electric power lines.

A giant oak tree fell across the automobile and garage of W. H. Lloyd at 934 St. Charles Ave., N.E.

The weatherman said Sunday was the coldest Dec. 1 in Atlanta since 1928 when 20.8 degrees was recorded at the airport.

Freezing temperatures covered most of the Southeast Sunday, dipping as far south as central Florida. No crop damage was reported in Florida Sunday but even lower temperatures were expected Monday morning.

Russians Are Building A Space-Travel Plane

MOSCOW, Dec. 1 (AP)—Russia is working on a "rocket plane" that looks like a combination of jet fighter and space ship in its campaign to be the first nation to achieve space flight by man, it was disclosed today.

The aviation publication Soviet-skaya Aviatsiya printed sketches today of such a plane and the accompanying description indicated it would cruise in space at speeds up to 10,000 miles an hour.

(A speed of roughly 25,000 miles an hour is required to hurl an object out of the earth's atmosphere into space.)

NOTED SCIENTIST

The newspaper's article on the plane, written by noted Soviet scientist V. Alexandrov, left no doubt that Russia was determined to add to the laurels achieved with the two Sputniks and the intercontinental ballistic missile.

"The construction by the Soviet Union of an intercontinental ballistic missile and successful launching of Sputniks brought considerably nearer the rocket plane epoch," Alexandrov wrote.

LAST PHASE

"The rocket plane is the last phase in development of the airplane before transition to interplanetary ship."

The sketches and Alexandrov's article bore out statements by other Soviet scientists after Sputnik I was launched that the Soviets were working on programs for manned space flights and trips to the moon.

The sketches showed the rocket plane to be a cross between a standard jet fighter and a space ship. Alexandrov said it would be built in the shape of a jet plane, but with folding wings.

LIKE ARTILLERY SHELL

It would blast off into space and then continue its flight in a trajectory "like an artillery shell," he wrote.

The wings would be folded against the side of the plane for the flight in space itself.

Returning, the wings would be extended on reaching the earth's atmosphere, enabling the plane to Congress Race in 7th Lacks Clear-Cut Issues

By WILLIAM M. BATES
Constitution Political Editor

The seventh District congressional battle has entered the final two days of a whirlwind campaign with all three candidates expressing confidence of victory.

Because of the brief campaign time, the candidates have made wide use of radio and television to get themselves before the voters. There has been a lot of handshaking and personal contact but few big rallies that traditionally mark Georgia campaigns.
Nor, so far, have any over-riding and clear-cut issues emerged from the battle. Each candidate is concentrating on trying to sell himself as the best person to represent the northwest Georgia district in Congress.
Seeking the Democratic nomination in Wednesday's primary to succeed the late Rep. Henderson Lanham are State Sen. Bobby Lee Cook of Summerville and Superior Court Judge James T. Manning of Marietta and Ervin Mitchell of Dalton.

William M. Bates

Mitchell, at 33 the youngest Superior Court judge on the bench, declines to make any prediction about the counties he will carry. But a campaign spokesman said the Mitchell forces are conceding only the home counties of the opposing candidates.
Cook says he expects to win by carrying at least seven of the 14 counties in the district. He's obviously banking on taking some of the larger, industrial counties with their larger county unit vote strength.
Manning's supporters indicate their strongest area, outside the judge's home county of Cobb, is the southern part of the district and particularly in the Tallapoosa Superior Court Circuit. This includes Polk, Douglas, Paulding and Haralson counties.

SKETCHES ON FORECASTS

While all three camps, naturally, say they expect their man to win, all are a bit cagey about spelling out the specific areas where they expect their greatest strength.

$20 Billion Christmas Sales Seen

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (UP)—Santa Claus will keep retail cash registers jingling merrily this month to the tune of about 20 billion dollars worth of business, the U. S. Chamber of Commerce predicted today.

The chamber said December sales were expected to top last year's $19,400,000,000 total, despite some recent tapering off in the economic boom.

MORE UNEMPLOYMENT

It conceded that rises in unemployment and a sag in the stock market may have made "Christmas shoppers" a little more cautious about opening their purses.

But, the chamber said, "chances are when the Christmas fever sets in, December sales should be the biggest yet, or at least tied for the first place with 1956."

It listed the population increase and large Christmas club savings as among the factors which would lead to heavy buying this month.

SPENDING OFF

On the other hand, it said, "there are recent indications of moderately rising unemployment," and the rate of consumer spending in relation to after-tax income has dropped in recent months.

The chamber also noted that "the buying public is becoming more price conscious."

In this connection, the Chamber said the most of the increase in December dollar volume over last December would represent price boosts rather than more goods sold.

Bridge Tourney Prize Is Won By Mrs. Wagar

Mrs. Margaret Wagar of Atlanta and her partner, Mrs. Ralph Gordon of Buffalo, N.Y., tied for second place with 29½ points in the women's team championship Sunday night at the American Contract Bridge League tournament in Los Angeles.

Leading with 33 points were Mrs. Charles J. Colomon and Mrs. Edward Cohen, both of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Stella Rebner and Mrs. Mary Jane Kauder, both of Los Angeles. Tied with Mrs. Wagar and Mrs. Gordon are Mrs. Helen Sobel and Mrs. Kay Rhodes, both of New York.

Leading in the men's team championship was the California team of Lew Mathe, Ed Taylor, and Meyer Schleifer, all of Los Angeles, and Don Oakie, of San Francisco, with a total of 35 match points.

Athens Girl, Blakely Boy Win $400 4-H Awards

CHICAGO, Dec. 1 (UP)—Two Georgia teen-agers, an Athens girl and a Blakely boy, were announced today as winners of $400 scholarships in national competitions at the National 4-H Club Congress here.

The awards brought the total of Georgia winners at the 36th annual Congress to three. The Georgians are among 1,300 delegates attending from 48 states and from U.S. territories.
Faye Chastain, 17, of Athens, was named as one of 12 winners in the 4-H Club clothing program.

Fred D. Waller, 17, the Blakely youth, was named one of six national winners in the national 4-H Boys' agricultural awards program.

Defense Asks More Take Dual Roles

OMAHA, Dec. 1 (UP)—More and more Americans will have to take on dual roles—half civilian and half military—if the country supplies the necessary manpower for national defense, Sen. Margaret Chase Smith, Maine Republican, said tonight.

Sen. Smith, a lieutenant colonel in the WAF Reserve, arrived at Strategic Air Command headquarters where she will interview officers and men for the next few days at the request of the secretary of the Air Force.

"My current duty is centered on dual roles—half civilian and half military—if the country supplies the necessary manpower for national defense," she said tonight.

"I want to run a straight, clean and honest campaign," Manning says. "I'm not going to fight dirty. If I win, well and good; I'll make arrangements to move to Washington in January. If I lose, I'll be holding court at the same old stand on Thursday morning."

"I want to run a straight, clean and honest campaign," Manning says. "I'm not going to fight dirty. If I win, well and good; I'll make arrangements to move to Washington in January. If I lose, I'll be holding court at the same old stand on Thursday morning."

trying to find out why so many missile technicians are leaving the Air Force and what can be done to make the service sufficiently attractive to keep them in," she said.
Addressing the Reserve Officers Assn. tonight, the senator enlarged on that theme, explaining that the armed forces cannot compete with private industry in a wage-or pay war. The answer, she said, lies in the dual status system.

ELDRIDGE PLUNKETT

We are backed up with one quarter of a million hours of Prayer, since 1943. Without obligation we pray and lay hands on a prayer handkerchief and send it to anyone who requests prayer.
Prayer handkerchiefs are in Acts 19:11-12 and used by many great Evangelists.

We believe it is much easier to get a prayer request answered if you have accepted Jesus as your Saviour.
Read the Coupon, believe it, sign, mail it so we can be witnesses before God that you received Christ.

THE First NATIONAL BANK

Brings You This Complete Listing of Atlanta Postal Zones

To speed the distribution and delivery of Christmas mails, the Post Office requires use of its numerical zoning system.

THE POSTMASTER SAYS:

- "1. Include zone numbers to complete the address of all mail—letters, cards, parcel post.
- "2. Place the zone number between the name of the city and state. Example: Atlanta 10, Georgia.
- "3. Include your zone number in return addresses, on stationery, in advertising."

BURL F. SANDERS, Postmaster.

The zoning information you need is presented on these two pages by The Man With a Plan. Streets, post office boxes, apartments, buildings, colleges and hotels are listed alphabetically with zone numbers. Where a division occurs in a street, it is so indicated.

The use of this system will also be extremely helpful in assuring you of more efficient postal service during other peak periods such as first-of-the-month mailings. As a year-around convenience, keep these First National postal zone pages handy.

British Heiress and Fiance Discovered In Scotland, Where They Could Marry

Associated Press Wirephoto
NO BABY, SHE SAYS
Tessa Kennedy

BLACKSHIELS, Scotland, Dec. 1 (AP)—Runaway British heiress Tessa Kennedy, 19, and fiance Dominic Elwes, 26, turned up today in this Scottish city, where an under-age girl may marry without her parents' consent.

Police warned Elwes that he is flying in the face of a London court order forbidding them to marry. The order was obtained Thursday by Miss Kennedy's mother.

"We are very much in love," the fair-haired Miss Kennedy told a reporter. "I hope Dominic will not weaken. We know our own minds. I'm not a baby."

In England, young people are forbidden to marry under the age of 21 without parental consent. In Scotland, anybody over 16 may do so.

There seemed to be some question whether the London court order would hold good in Scotland, and there were rumors Mrs. Kennedy would seek a second injunction in the Edinburgh Court of Session.

Miss Kennedy, an "infant ward of the court," is under orders of the High Court in London not to marry or leave the country. She is a daughter of the former Daskas Ivanovic—now wife of Neil McLean, member of Parliament—and Geoffrey Kennedy, an engineer. The Kennedy's were divorced in 1949. As a ward of the court, Miss Kennedy is forbidden to marry without the court's permission until she becomes of age.

An injunction also was granted against Elwes, restraining him from "removing or assisting in the removal" of Miss Kennedy from the court's jurisdiction.

Elwes is the son of Simon Elwes, well-known English painter.

U.S., Reds Nip and Tuck, AF Rocket Chief Says

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (AP)—The Air Force's chief missiles scientist said today the United States and Russia are in a "nip and tuck" race to develop ballistic missiles and "we need to do everything possible to go faster."

Dr. Simon Ramo stressed that he was talking about the long-range race and not trying to predict who will have intermediate and intercontinental missiles first.

"We may actually succeed in having an operational capability of a substantial amount before they do," Ramo said, "only to find a year later that they have outdone us and have a much more substantial capability. It is a continuing process."

"The initial capability is not so important as the trend."

Ramo estimated in an NBC radio-TV interview — "Meet the Press"—that a 10- to 25-per-cent expansion of the present missile program is needed but the long-range programs "beyond Thor and Atlas" need to be doubled.

Ramo is helping primarily with development of the Atlas and Titan, the 5,000-mile range intercontinental missile, and Thor, the Air Force's intermediate-range missile.

He refused to be pinned down on a guess as to how the United States now stands with Russia in the missile race. Because of security on both sides of the Iron Curtain, he said, it is "beyond any individual in the world" to say exactly how the two nations compare in their missile progress.

Ramo added that when in doubt it's only safe to assume the Russians are ahead.

The reason the United States may be behind, Ramo said, is that "we started late" in developing missiles.

New-type, sound-conditioned concrete for the Interstate System

Developed to meet the highway standards of 1975

Everything a good driver wants—new-type concrete has. There's never a "thump." It's sound-conditioned. Laid continuously, this pavement has no joints . . . only tiny, almost invisible cushion spaces, saved into the concrete. You skim over them and don't know it! This new-type concrete is laid flat—stays flat. It has a life expectancy of 50 years and more.

Over 90% of America's most heavily travelled roads have been built of concrete. It's the preferred pavement for the new Interstate System.

YOUTHS (LEFT) STEAL WOMAN'S CAR AND BABY
Mrs. Herlitz' Baby Found 100 Miles Away

Kidnaped Baby Found In Old Car; 2 Are Held

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Dec. 1 (AP)—State highway patrolmen racing against time recovered a 3-month-old Columbus baby abandoned in bitter cold early today at Portsmouth, Ohio, about 90 miles south of here.

They also arrested Nathaniel Sexton, 23, and his brother William, 19, both of Columbus, who face possible auto theft and kidnapping charges.

The baby, Robert Wayne Herlitz, son of Mrs. Wayne H. Herlitz, 16, of Columbus, had been left in her parked car "for a few seconds," Mrs. Herlitz said, while she stopped at a Columbus tavern about 1 a.m. to pick up a girl friend. When she returned the car was gone.

2 Youths Held Here in Stabbing

Two teen-age Chattanooga, Tenn. youths who were picked up early Sunday at an Atlanta bus station told police they were wanted for stabbing a 15-year-old Chattanooga, police records showed.

$90,000 Yacht Burns; 3 Struggle from Muck

A yacht captain Sunday told how he and two others were almost swallowed by marsh muck at St. Simons Island when they abandoned a burning luxury cruiser.

John Lewis, 39, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., said his hysterical wife, 35, at one time had only her head and arms still above the quicksand-like mud. He persuaded her to wiggle her legs, then pulled her to the surface while floating himself on his stomach.

Lewis was bringing a new $90,000 cruiser south from a Yonkers, N.Y., factory for his employer John P. Rodi, Chicago and Ft. Lauderdale boat dealer.

It caught fire in the inter-coastal waterway and Lewis had only time for an SOS before abandoning ship.

With him in addition to his wife was her sister, Mrs. Joyce Carr, 25, Fort Lauderdale. They had no time to get life preservers.

$30 Million Growth Planned by Loyola

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 1 (AP)—Loyola University of the South today announced a 30 million dollar, 15-year building and endowment program.

The Very Rev. W. Patrick Donnelly, S.J., president of the Catholic school, outlined the expansion project at the annual alumni breakfast opening homecoming week at Loyola.

Egypt Approves Red-Aided 3-Year Industrial Plan

CAIRO, Dec. 1 (AP)—Egypt's Cabinet tonight approved a Soviet-aided industrialization plan, to be completed in three years. The original plan called for a five-year schedule.

Industry Minister Aziz Sidky said the Cabinet also approved sending an Egyptian delegation to Moscow to work out details of the proposed Soviet-Egyptian economic agreement. Sidky will lead the delegation. Gen. Mohammed Sidky, Egyptian air force commander, declared meantime that with Soviet-bloc supplies his country's air force is now the strongest in the Middle East.

Sitting Bull V Born at Hospital In Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 1 (AP)—Sitting Bull V was born at the University of California at Los Angeles Medical Center Hospital yesterday.

His great-great-grandfather scored a knockout over Gen. George Armstrong Custer at the Battle of the Little Big Horn in 1876.

The little Sioux chieftain weighed in at 9 pounds. His parents are Vincent (Sitting Bull IV) and Frances Cadotte. His father, a disabled veteran of the 101st Airborne Div., was injured in a jump in Korea, and now is a mail clerk at the Hughes aircraft plant.

The little warrior hasn't received a first name yet. In fact, his mother had been expecting a girl—a sweet Sioux—but she says she is most happy to have little Sitting Bull V.

FALSE TEETH That Loosen Need Not Embarrass

Many wearers of false teeth have suffered real embarrassment because their plate dropped, slipped or wobbled at just the wrong time. Do not live in fear of this happening to you. Just sprinkle a little FASTEETH, the alkaline (non-acid) powder, on your plates. Hold false teeth more firmly. So they feel more comfortable. Does not sour. Checks "plate odor" (denture breath). Get FASTEETH at any drug counter.

The true cost of Georgia's new highways

It all depends on how long they last. New-type concrete has a life expectancy of 50 years and more. First cost is moderate. Maintenance costs are lower than for any other type of pavement. That's why tax dollars go farther with concrete.

As I See It

Paths of TV Glory
Leading to Limbo

By PAUL JONES

Television's grim reaper is beginning to take his toll.

You soon can say bye-bye to four shows—three of which have been old stand-bys for several years. The fourth is a program which I don't think ever got off the ground.

The four—and there are others to come—are the Garry Moore daytime show, Strike It Rich, Ted Mack's Amateur Hour and Guy Mitchell's program. I don't know who made the decision, in each instance, to take these shows off the air, but all are wise.

Moore apparently is taking himself out of the lineup. He said he plans to give it up at the end of the summer. "It may seem odd to make such a request (to be relieved) so far in advance," said Garry, "I do it simply to give the network, our sponsors and my magnificent cast and staff as much notice as possible."

Garry has done 2,000 broadcasts in the eight years he's been on this daytime show.

The show, at first, was original, bright and funny. In the past year or two it has become stereotyped with silly childish stunts, and countless commercials.

STRIKE IT RICH, which has my nomination as the worst program on television, is being replaced with a new giveaway show apparently because it has lost viewers by the millions.

The new show will be called "Dollar Dotto." Contestants will attempt to identify a mystery personality as pieces of a jigsaw puzzle are put together on a giant board. This change will be made Jan. 6.

Guy Mitchell never had a chance. Production of his show has been poor. Even the cameramen didn't seem to know where to aim their cameras.

Low budget figures for guest stars hampered him in this respect and, although Guy has a big talent for singing the rock-a-billy tunes, he wasn't able to express himself in television because of inept direction. His show will fade after the first of the year. It will sort of get lost in the Christmas shuffle somehow.

Ted Mack's Amateur Hour has had it coming to it for a long time. This thing has been operating on borrowed time since Major Bowes bowed out back in the heyday of radio. It never changed. No new ideas in staging were incorporated. It has simply been a radio show before TV. Too bad. This show did showcase some excellent talent, such as Paul Winchell.

But, in TV even the pros often find the going too tough.

MRS. G. V. LEDBETTER, of College Park, writes: "Lawrence Welk is our best TV show. No, a thousand times no, we don't want pay TV. If Mr. Welk and his fine music makers go off we'll quit looking at TV."

JAN HARPER, of Somerville, writes: "I am very interested in writing to Steve Allen. Could you please put the address in your column. My vote is 'no' to pay TV."

You can write to Steve at NBC-Television, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York 20, N.Y. I am happy to say that he reads all of his mail personally and he will likely answer your letter, Jan.

DID YOU KNOW—Dean Martin old diners at Las Vegas' Sands Hotel about his recent operation. "My whole life flashed before me," Dino said. "Even the doctors applauded."

All is not bliss on the Eddie Fisher-George Gobel show... The boys themselves are happy enough, but the sponsors don't like the ratings... Seems they should wear cowboy outfits on the show every week... A new series, Guestward Ho is being offered Jane Russell... One Tennessee Ernie Ford is one of the most popular of all entertainers in the Atlanta viewing area... Perry Como is tops... Guy Mitchell holds down second place.

'Mary Stuart', Bernstein Exceptional on Omnibus

By J. P. SHANLEY
NEW YORK, Dec. 1 (AP)—"Omnibus" provided 90 minutes of exceptionally fine television today.

The program presented scenes from "Mary Stuart," the adaptation of the Friedrich Schiller tragedy, and a filmed report on Leonard Bernstein's recent musical tour of Israel.

"Mary Stuart," adapted by Jean Stock Goldstone and John Reich, recently was presented successfully here at the Phoenix Theater. The leading players of the stage production, including Eva Le Gallienne as Elizabeth, Irene Worth as Mary, Douglas Campbell as Leicester and Max Adrian as Burleigh, appeared in the televised version, edited by Walter Kerr.

SEE ENCYCLOPEDIA

In its abbreviated form, the presentation assumed some knowledge of the events of the period on the part of the viewer. This was not, however, a liability. It would not be surprising if many of those who witnessed the effective dramatization were impelled afterwards to some encyclopedias in order to acquaint themselves with the historical events of the Sixteenth Century that led to the conflict between Mary and Elizabeth.

Brilliantly acted and written, the telecast was a treat for those who regard the television screen as a source of enlightenment as well as entertainment.

In the other sector of the Robert Saudek production, Mr. Bernstein and his wife, Felicia Montealegre, were shown as they visited various parts of Israel and Europe.

INFORMAL TOUR

Informality was the keynote of the tour. Bernstein appeared as he conducted a symphony orchestra against the clanging, thumping background noises made by artisans completing a new concert auditorium in Tel Aviv.

There were other indications of the spirited interest of the people of Israel in music, conveyed in a series of delightful sequences.

Bernstein's recent appointment as musical director of the New York Philharmonic was announced after the film was completed. If patrons of the Philharmonic respond to his music with the same enthusiasm as his Israeli audiences, Bernstein should be a contented maestro indeed.

Yankee Girl Makes Port Minus Sail

NORFOLK, Va., Dec. 1 (AP)—The sail-less schooner Yankee Girl was towed into Morehead City, N.C., harbor shortly after 9 o'clock tonight after a 27-hour rescue effort by the Coast Guard cutter Chilula.

The Chilula reached the Yankee Girl 90 miles off Cape Lookout yesterday at 6:30 p.m. in answer to the sailing vessel's Mayday message sent out about 10 hours ripped out her sails.

It took three hours for the Chilula to get a tow-line aboard the schooner, only to have it snap minutes later. It was 7:28 a.m. today before the Coast Guard men could pass a second line to the Yankee Girl.

The Yankee Girl, with seven persons aboard, was on her way from Morehead City to Nassau, Bahamas, after a trip from New York through the intracoastal waterway. She left Morehead City Friday.

Tito Marks Holiday At Secluded Brioni

BELGRADE, Dec. 1 (AP)—Radio Belgrade said tonight President Tito celebrated Yugoslavia's national holiday at his secluded island of Brioni in the northern Adriatic.

The President and his wife left Belgrade several days ago for Brioni, where Tito is continuing to undergo treatment for lumbago, the radio said.

Vice Presidents Edvard Kardelj and Aleksandar Rankovic also arrived on Brioni.

They were in Moscow recently for the 40th anniversary celebration of the Bolshevik Revolution. It is believed they went to Brioni to give Tito a first-hand report on their Moscow talks.

New Series On Science Falls Short

By JACK GOULD

(Copyright 1957 by New York Times Co.) NEW YORK, Dec. 1—"Conquest," which made its debut this afternoon over Channel 2, is a new filmed series dealing with progress in the world of science.

The premiere was in the nature of an introduction, holding considerable interest in spots but never digging very deeply into its fascinating subject matter.

The highlight of the opening program was a filmed report of the balloon ascent of Maj. David Simonds of the Air Force, who 15 weeks ago rose to a height of more than nine miles. The preparations and the anxious moments when the major was trapped over a thunderstorm made an illuminating documentary film. The failure to ask the major any detailed questions about his experience, however, was a serious oversight. His description of man's first full day on the fringe of outer space would seem worth soliciting at least.

"Conquest" also offered unusual films showing laboratory study of cells and the origin of life. Another segment of the program dealt with explorations of the ocean floor by Dr. Maurice Ewing of the Lamont Observatory of Columbia University. This portion of the program, however, was marred by soap opera theatrics that should have been omitted.

"Conquest" concluded with interviews with Dr. Lawrence Snyder, president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and Dr. Alan T. Waterman, director of the National Science Foundation. Dr. Snyder pleaded for a climate of greater intellectual freedom if basic research is to flourish. Eric Sevareid is narrator for "Conquest." Today he was sternly formal.

If "Conquest" can stand less in awe of scientists and display more curiosity and excitement in exploring the wonders of science, the program would benefit materially.

Negroes Shown To Face Little Bias in Navy

NEW YORK, Dec. 1 (AP)—An American Civil Liberties Union survey released today found practically no discrimination against the Negro on U.S. Navy ships and bases.

The report observed, however, "There is room for even more improvement."

Well-qualified Negroes have difficulty being accepted for the Naval Reserve Officer Training Corps in colleges, the survey said, and "the Navy still has no Negro command officers, although the merchant marine has long had them."

U.S. Pressed for Views On France-Algerian Talk

By WILLIAM N. OATIS
UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Dec. 1 (AP)—The United States was under pressure from Asian, African and European allies today to take a stand for or against Algerian-French negotiations on freedom for Algeria.

An American source told a reporter the position would be disclosed in a speech by U.S. Delegate Henry Cabot Lodge in the U.N. General Assembly's Political Committee, probably this week. He added nothing would be said about it until then.

PREPARING RESOLUTION

African and Asian delegations were working on a resolution whereby the Assembly would call on France to negotiate with Algerian Nationalists for settlement of the three-year-old rebellion in Algeria.

Moroccan King Mohammed V and Tunisian President Habib Bourguiba have offered to help in such negotiations to be based on sovereignty for Algeria and safeguards for French interests. But French Foreign Minister Christian Pineau told the U.N. committee in opening Algeria debate Wednesday that a cease-fire and elections must precede any talks.

ALGERIAN POSITION

A spokesman for the rebel Algerian Front of National Liberation said today its position was that a cease-fire could come only through a political settlement resulting from negotiations on the basis of independence. He said its main issue with France was whether the cease-fire should come before or after the discussions.

"We are all anxious to hear the U.S. position," this source said. "Everybody has been asking the

AFL-CIO Vice President Sees Teamster Expulsion

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (AP)—AFL-CIO Vice President James B. Carey predicted today that the AFL-CIO convention this week will vote "almost unanimously" to expel the giant Teamsters Union from the federation.

He made it plain that the expected expulsion stemmed directly from the election of Teamsters vice president James R. Hoffa to replace retiring Dave Beck as union president. Both officials were targets of corruption charges by the AFL-CIO and Senate investigators.

"In some ways, Hoffa is more dangerous than Beck," Carey said. "He is younger and healthier."

The AFL-CIO Executive Council already has suspended the Teamsters, primarily because of the union's failure to oust Hoffa from leadership. It will recommend that the union be formally expelled at the convention opening next Thursday in Atlantic City, N. J. Carey, president of the International Union of Electrical Workers, appeared on the NBC television program, "Youth Wants To Know." He voiced confidence that the convention would go along with the council's recommendation.

But in expelling the union, Carey said, the convention also must make some provision for Teamsters locals and rank-and-file members who wish to shake off corrupt leaders and remain in the AFL-CIO.

'Stampede' To Produce ICBMs Hit

U.S. Must Match Red Troops, Too

By JACK RAYMOND
(Copyright 1957 by New York Times Co.)
WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Some military officials, particularly in the Army, are criticizing the "stampede" to produce long-range ballistic missiles and other weapons designed for nuclear warfare.

According to these officials, the effort to match the Russians in developing intermediate and intercontinental range weapons should be accompanied by a move to keep up with the Soviet advance in conventional weapons. The proposal is based on the premise that "brushfire" or "limited" hostilities are more likely to confront the United States than an all-out nuclear attack.

PARADED THEM

Information has reached here that the Russians have developed a spectacular roster of improved weapons for ground forces. They displayed some of these weapons at the Nov. 7 parade in Moscow, commemorating the Bolshevik revolution.

Supporting information has been obtained from a variety of sources, it is added, and will be the subject of inquiries by congressmen next January. A few congressmen have visited the Soviet Union and others have learned of these developments in general European tours.

A summary of Soviet advances with "conventional" ground forces equipment, including improvements on types that were revealed during World War II, includes:

1. Heavy tanks with 122 mm. guns that can travel 140 miles in combat without refueling.
2. Self-propelled 57 mm. guns that are light enough to be transported by the Russians' new heavy-duty helicopter, and a self-propelled recoilless 12-inch gun that a veteran military observer has described as "surprisingly mobile."

3. Full-tracked 240 mm. rocket guns with five-mile range, as well as several missile launchers with ranges of 10, 50, 150 and 350 miles.

4. New guns and howitzers, including one of the latter that can move 30 miles an hour instead of the three miles an hour achieved by its predecessors in the Soviet arsenal. Also there are mortars as big as 240 mm, possibly capable of firing atomic shells.

5. New style assault amphibians tracked personnel carriers, and a long-range transport with a diesel motor that goes a mile on a gallon of fuel. A similar American vehicle gets a mile on six gallons.

NEW SMALL ARMS

6. A variety of new small arms, motorcycle-drawn 85 mm. guns, and new anti-tank guns capable of piercing 12 inches of armor.

One of the most important Russian developments, it is said, is the Soviet helicopter with a hauling capacity of 27,000 pounds. The largest U.S. helicopter's payload is 7,500 pounds.

At the same time, it is pointed out, the Russians have been able to maintain large ground forces—some 175 divisions, compared to the U.S. trend of reducing to 15 by the end of next year.

According to some sources at the Pentagon, the U.S. has developed a variety of new weapons that also are spectacularly powerful and mobile. These have not yet been revealed.

However, army officials say the Russians appear to be modernizing their ground forces faster than the U.S.

'Ex' of Sinatra Burned Dousing Fire

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 1 (AP).—Nancy Sinatra, divorced wife of singer Frank Sinatra, was recovering today from painful burns on her neck and chin suffered when she attempted to put out a fire in the breakfast room of her home. Mrs. Sinatra told firemen the blaze began yesterday when window curtains caught fire. Her daughter, Tina, 9, had been holding a candle near. Mrs. Sinatra tried to put out the fire herself but she called firemen when she found she was unable to control it.

Big Cities Begin Move For Direct Federal Aid

By HAROLD V. STREETER

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 1 (AP).—That centuries-old rivalry of the big city and the country crossroads town popped up here today at a national meeting of municipal officials.

A move by big cities to get federal aid direct from the government, bypassing "rurally dominated state legislatures," was initiated by a committee of the American Municipal Assn. Heading the committee was Philadelphia's Mayor Richardson Dilworth.

The resolution will be taken up Wednesday by the AMA's 1,600 delegate congress—a king-sized town hall gathering of everybody from the Mayor of New York—population 7 million plus—to the mayor of Los Banos, Calif.—4,500.

Dilworth's Metropolitan Government Committee pointed out that the big cities have 65 per cent of the revenues collected by the federal government. But, the resolution charged, these cities are "severely short-changed in the various federal grant-in-aid programs."

Then it brought up the big city-small town issue thus: "Because federal grants are channeled

Lack of Faith Is Called Threat to U.S. Religion

National Church Council President Denounces Man's Distrust of Man

By GEORGE DUGAN

(Copyright 1957 by The New York Times Co.)

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 1.—The chief spokesman for American Protestantism singled out man's distrust of man here tonight as the costliest of "all the failures and weaknesses of the Christian church."

Formally opening the triennial General Assembly of the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the U.S.A., the Rev. Eugene Carson Blake declared that lack of faith among Christians "continually threatens" the effectiveness of religion in this country.

Dr. Blake is president of the National Council and chief administrative officer of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A.

The Council represents 30 Protestant and Eastern Orthodox bodies with nearly 37,000,000 members. Some 800 official delegates, and more than 1,000 observers and visitors are here to attend the six-day assembly.

AVOIDS DETAIL

Dr. Blake told the delegates that he had no intention of going into "unpleasant and embarrassing detail" in regard to this charge.

"All I shall do," he said, "is to remind you that there is distrust between ministers and laity—the distrust goes both ways. There is distrust between ecclesiastical officials and ordinary pastors—the grass roots and the hierarchies."

"There is distrust of our conservative constituency by the liberals, theological and political, and the opposite. There is distrust between North and South, Eastern Seaboard and Middle West, between black and white, between thinkers and doers, activists and mystics, Catholic and Evangelical, liturgists and free worshippers, rich and not so rich, managers and laborers, owners and wage earners, old and young, men and women."

MISTRUST INTEGRITY

Dr. Blake made it clear that his references were not to differences of opinion or conviction but to "mistrust of the integrity and Christianity of those who hold to the differences."

The church leader also expressed concern over what he described as growing skepticism and hypocrisy.

He said: "This general skepticism of one another and our accommodation to general hypocrisy finds its worst expression and illustration in politics, but even in our churches and especially in such a large Christian organization as the National Council of Churches, it also appears with blighting and crippling effects."

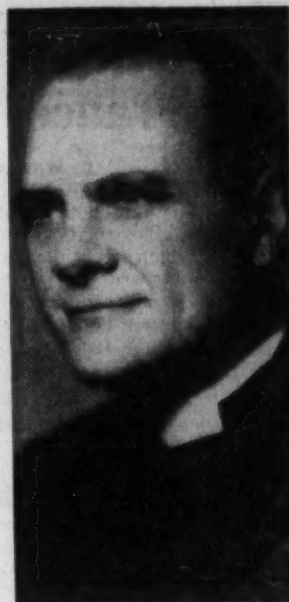

OVERGULLIBILITY

At the same time, Dr. Blake warned against overgullibility.

The free world, he asserted, "faces a true crisis in that it will be as dangerous to continue 100 per cent skepticism of totalitarian communism as it would be to believe all the protestations of peaceful intentions that come from the Kremlin."

"Our only long-range hope must be that God is powerful enough somehow, some way to convert the Communists," Dr. Blake said. "And while we work and pray for that we must pray that the free world's actions may be good enough, and wise enough that God may be able to bring to us His renewal and salvation rather than His judgment."

On the stage during the opening service of worship were Dr. Blake, who also read the Scripture lesson; the Rev. Hampton Adams of New York, chairman of the assembly program and arrangements committee, who gave the initial presentations of the program and the final prayer; the Rev. Roy G. Ross, National Council general secretary.

U.S. Atom Work Said Inadequate

Durham Asks AEC For Reappraisal

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (AP).—Rep. Durham (D-NC) said today the U.S. atomic power program is inadequate and confused. He called on the Atomic Energy Commission for a reappraisal of its aims.

Durham, chairman of the Senate-Atomic Energy Committee, made his views known in a letter to AEC Chairman Lewis L. Strauss.

Among other things, Durham renewed a proposal of a 10-year demonstration power reactor program to provide long-term assurance to private industry of government aid for private and public atomic power development.

Writing Strauss, Durham asserted: "There appears to be considerable confusion as to what our objectives and policies are, or should be."

"However, the general consensus seems to be that the current atomic power development program is not adequate, particularly if we take into account the objective of world leadership in reactor technology."

Durham's letter appeared to be another indication of dissatisfaction among some members of Congress over development of the peacetime uses of atomic energy, particularly in relation to Soviet claims of atomic power successes.

The North Carolina Democrat wrote Strauss that discussions among committee members and interested individuals here and abroad "have all pointed to the Child Escapes from Sitter, Leaves Home To Set Fires

DETROIT, Dec. 1 (AP).—Arson detectives have turned the case of a three-and-a-half-year-old firebug over to policewomen.

The toddler escaped from a baby sitter yesterday and set three fires in a nearby supermarket before he was caught.

Lawrence Hodges, the store manager, discovered a fire in a trash box in an employee's room. Moments later he found a second fire. He had just finished putting that one out when he discovered a third blaze burning in a stockroom corner.

"I knew then," he said, "that I had a firebug on my hands." He began a hunt and shortly nabbed Thomas Myles, Hodges knew the lad so he took him home. A baby-sitter answered the door. She told Hodges the boy's mother gave birth to another child Friday and his father was at work. She said he'd been looking for the boy and thanked Hodges for returning him. A policewoman was assigned to handle the problem boy.

Parked Car Yields Bodies Of 2 N.J. Longshoremen

JERSEY CITY, N.J., Dec. 1 (AP).—The bullet-riddled bodies of two Jersey City longshoremen were found slumped in the rear seat of a sedan parked in a residential neighborhood here today.

Police said the sedan apparently had been parked there after the men had been shot somewhere else.

The men, one of whom had a local police record dating back to 1925, were finally noticed by a curious 5-year-old girl who peered into the back seat of the 1954 sedan.

Police identified the victims as Patrick Martinetti, 45, who used the alias "Paddy the Priest," and Marino Romito, 28.

In New York, Dep. Police Commissioner Walter Arm said police are investigating the slaying to see if it has any bearing on the shooting of gangland figure Albert Anastasia, who was gunned down in a barber's chair in New York in October.

Martinetti's local police record dates back to 1925, the officers said. He did time in Sing Sing in 1934 on an assault conviction and was last arrested in 1953 on a gambling charge.

Romito was also a reputed small-time gambler. The death car was his, police said.

Police sifted the meager evidence available in the time since the crime was discovered at 2:30 p.m. They said the slaying was done elsewhere and the bodies transported here.

Ten expended shells were found on the floor of the sedan and both men had been shot several times in the face. No weapon was found.

The coroner's office could not immediately place the time of death but said the men had been dead "quite a while". Police said the men were apparently shot from the front seat as they cringed in the back of the auto.

Anastasia's death Oct. 14 ended a long career during which he was reportedly gangland's "high executioner."

He lived in a 15-room mansion atop the Hudson River Palisades at Fort Lee, N. J.

Officials of the American Automobile Assn., Jesup Chamber of Commerce and Wayne County will meet at 10:30 a.m. Monday in Jesup to discuss complaints against use of an electric timing device. George Evey, secretary-manager of the AAA's Georgia Motor Club, said he would request Jack Fishman, manager of the Jesup Chamber of Commerce, and C. C. Harris, Wayne County commissioner, to remove the device. Evey said there has been a "terrific number of complaints and an excessive number of bond cases from Wayne County." He added that if the device is not removed by John Reddish, Wayne County sheriff, the AAA will route its members off U. S. Highway 301 and on to U. S. 17. Evey said the Georgia club sent checks totaling $1,065 for arrest bond certificates to Wayne County for cases made from Oct. 4 through Nov. 25. The timing device is set up 10 miles south of Jesup. Elmer Jenkins, AAA national travel director, wrote Evey last June about the Jesup situation, urging something be done to improve the condition. In a more recent letter, Jenkins wrote Evey that "we are not asking any special consideration for

Yule Seal Sales Reach $39,642 Here

The annual Christmas Seal Sale for funds to combat tuberculosis in Fulton, DeKalb and Rockdale counties has thus far reached $39,642 toward its goal of $110,000, it was announced Sunday by W. W. (Bill) Neal, Christmas seal chairman.

The sale, Neal pointed out, provides income for the Atlanta Tuberculosis Assn., one of the oldest TB agencies in the United States.

The Atlanta association has been active in the prevention and treatment of the disease for 51 years and has played a major role in local and state health work, Neal said.

The sale of seals is handled by mail except for one booth which will open in the Old Post Office at Walton and Forsyth Sts. next Monday, under the direction of Miss Myrtle Hardy, a volunteer worker.

The work of the Atlanta Tuberculosis Association is endorsed by Dr. Don Cathcart, president of Fulton County Medical Society; Dr. T. F. Sellers, director of the Georgia Public Health Department; Dr. Arthur P. Richardson, dean of Emory School of Medicine; Dr. James F. Hackney, Commissioner of Health of Fulton County; Dr. T. O. Vinson of DeKalb County, and Dr. Charles LeMaire, Chairman of the Tuberculosis Interagency Committee of Georgia.

The work for which Christmas Seal funds are being sought includes the services of a professor of tuberculosis and chest diseases at Emory School of Medicine for intensive training in TB of medical students. Dr. Ross McLean, a nationally known TB authority, has been engaged for this professorship. He will also direct the bed side care of TB patients in the new Grady Hospital.

Dougherty Could Dislodge Floyd From 6-Unit County List in 1960

By BRUCE GALPHIN
Dougherty County may knock Floyd County off the six-unit list after the 1960 census, present estimates indicate.

One sure change in the existing apportionment will be the elevation of Houston from a two-unit to a four-unit county. That would kick Meriwether back down among the two-unit counties.

Predictions depend in part upon whose figures are used. Two comprehensive sets of estimates are currently available: those of the Georgia Health Department, and those of Tech's Industrial Development Branch.

DIFFERENCE VARIES
Sometimes the differences between their figures are small. At other times they are critical.

July 1, 1957, estimates from each group are available. The Tech figures show Cherokee County has edged Mitchell County out as the 38th largest and thus the smallest four-unit county. The health department still has Mitchell slightly ahead.

The most serious disagreement between the two sets of figures is in the important estimate for Dougherty County.

According to the health department, there are 57,400 persons living in Albany and Dougherty County. But the Tech bureau says 70,653. Both sources place Rome-Floyd County population between 66,000 and 67,000.

However, the health figures do not include military bases, whereas Tech's do. Significantly, the U.S. Bureau of Census, on whose figures the county unit apportionment is determined, also includes military installations.

Dougherty County has two large bases, the Marine Supply Depot and Turner Air Force base.

HOUSTON ADVANCES

Under Georgia law, units are apportioned after every decadal census in the following manner: the eight largest counties receive six unit votes, the next 30 get four units, and the other 121 are assigned two units.

Under this system, Houston County, which has grown from 20,984 in 1950 to about 32,000 today, will become a four-unit county. Meriwether, which knocked off Washington as the smallest four-unit county seven years ago, appears to be itself bumped down. For the most part, though, it would seem that the distribution of unit votes will remain about the same after 1960. Population figures show the big counties are getting bigger and the small ones smaller.

The weight of the county unit is heavier than ever. Since Fulton County now has 561,000 citizens and Echols County has 2,072, it now takes 90 Fulton popular votes to balance one Echols vote.

Clarke Donaldson Mends After Surgery

Clarke Donaldson, retired city chief of construction, is recuperating at St. Joseph's Infirmary from an operation. The official retired last July 1 after 45 years' service with the city. He had served as chief of the department for 29 consecutive years.

Doctors reported his condition is "fine."

Administration Ponders Budget-Cutting Problem

Officials Search for Major Savings
In Nation's Nondefense Activities

theoretically be cut out at once, with an immediate savings of $500,000,000 or more. But a big disadvantage to this idea is that the crops grown on former soil bank land would wind up under price support with a cost to the government possibly even greater than the cost of the soil bank.

Some smaller farm programs might be reduced. But even changes in law cannot make big savings immediately in the overall $5,000,000,000 outlay.

2. Veterans. Here the administration is likely to propose a "painful" change in the law aimed at gradually reducing the outlay on non-service-connected pensions. But there is no chance whatever of a law taking away pensions from veterans who already have them. This change would simply be aimed at preventing an otherwise inevitable increase in veterans' costs in the future, not at achieving immediate savings.

UNTOUCHABLE FUNDS

Again, the $5,000,000,000 is virtually untouchable over the short run.

3. Public assistance grants to the states. Here the formula for the amount of federal matching funds is in effect until mid-1959. Even if the administration should ask that a future formula call for less federal spending, there would be no saving in fiscal 1959 from the present level of $1,800,000,000.

4. Interest on the public debt. Needless to say, this cannot be cut by any change in law. Only lower general interest rates would reduce this item. The best guess is that the outlay will be little changed from the $7,800,000,000 estimated for this year.

Some administration officials say Congress should be required to take "distasteful" actions in at least the farm and veterans areas even if no immediate savings are possible.

BIG SAVINGS NEEDED

They reason that the big savings will be needed in fiscal 1960 and later, when the bulk of the increases in missile and other national security programs will be reflected in actual spending.

Thus decisions now to retrench in these areas might ease the potentially severe budget problems for fiscal 1960 and later. Congressional reaction to legislation reducing farm and veterans' benefits remains to be seen of course.

Outside the major programs, the chances for cutting out or deferring "entire categories of activities" with quick savings are a little better. The trouble is that the savings are not likely to add up to much—certainly not enough to offset the probable increase of at least $1,000,000,000 in defense spending.

Such activities as grants to the states for water treatment facilities, grants for school construction and operation in areas of major federal installations, one or two special housing programs, and loans for college dormitories might be eliminated or cut back drastically.

Even here, however, there are problems. There is a reason for each of these programs, to say nothing of strong congressional support for them. While final decisions presumably have not been made, the administration may discover that it will want to cut out few of them if any.

coarse sandy beaches where the "bird watchers" of the missile age are accustomed to watch the Cape Canaveral launchings, the Vanguard tower was clear against a starry sky, two bright white lights glaring at its base and a red beacon shining at its top.

This morning, from the same vantage, the alternating red and white horizontal stripes of the big gantry crane stood out. From the beach, the Vanguard crane is one of a community of launching structures, some taller, some broader than others.

COLORFUL SHOOTING

Intermittently since the first launching from the Cape July 24, 1950, (a V2 plus a WAC Corporal) one or the other of the sites has suddenly come to life with a roar of gases, a spreading cloud and a hopeful but not always successful whoosh of a rocket out over the Atlantic. The life, language and the folkways of the Cocoa Beach area have been colored by the eerie events.

Two of the previous "failures"—although a shot can be unsuccessful without being a scientific failure—have involved the Air Force's mighty Atlas, the nation's bid for an assembly-line intercontinental ballistic missile.

Even the eminence of the Vanguard shot cannot disguise the interest in this never-never strip of the Florida coast of another try with an Atlas.

Not only that, but there are persistent hints and indications that the next Atlas is due to be touched off within a few days of the Vanguard launching. For one thing, a new basic fact sheet on Atlas was made available a few days ago by the Convair Co., primary contractor. On the other hand, Vanguard clearly has next billing at the sprawling missile theater here; and it is Vanguard that is ready to take the stage.

The audience includes Project Vanguard officials and correspondents from as far as Europe. A group of experts from the Martin Co. of Baltimore, prime maker of the Vanguard, is due to arrive tomorrow night with J. Paul Walsh, deputy director of the project.

Dr. John P. Hagen, director of the project for the Naval Research Laboratory, is expected to stay in Washington. He will be in a position to give an authoritative briefing on the orbiting of the satellite within a few hours of the blast-off here.

AF TEST CENTER

Vanguard was originally announced at the White House July 29, 1955. The program was undertaken at the request of the U.S. National Committee for the International Geophysical Year. This was established by the National Academy of Sciences, which is sponsoring U.S. participation in the IGY with support from the national foundation.

The technical implementation was assigned to the Naval Research Laboratory. The Air Force Missile Test Center here provides the facilities. Cape Canaveral is located midway down the Florida coast between Jacksonville and Miami, separated from the mainland by the Banana River. Patrick Air Force Base, 18 miles south of Canaveral, is administration headquarters for the center.

The Vanguard launching vehicle is a three-stage rocket, of which the third is enclosed in the forward part of the second. The gross weight with propellants—liquid oxygen and kerosene—is about 11 tons. The rocket is at no point more than 45 inches across.

Ike Needs All 'Executive Vigor' in Job Ahead

those special duties that are specifically laid upon the President by the constitution and cannot be delegated to anybody else.

That is to say, the signing of papers, calling the Congress into session, appointing officials, and kindred officers. In order to demonstrate Eisenhower's capacity to do this kind of thing, his press secretary, James C. Hagerty, released the other day documents showing the President's signature written after his latest attack.

Coincidentally, Nixon called his first formal news conference in the White House to emphasize that there are no decisions now before the President that he cannot make, and to assert that nobody in the administration is considering, or even thinking about, a presidential resignation or the formal delegation of any presidential powers to the vice president or anybody else.

On these points there is no dispute. Those who are concerned about presidential leadership are not questioning the President's capacity to sign letters, or proclamations, or any of the other specific constitutional duties that can, as Woodrow Wilson demonstrated during his long period of paralysis, be carried on by a chief executive much more seriously ill than Eisenhower.

They are concerned about the hard, relentless task of providing presidential leadership in the nation, the task of determining policy in the face of the most serious Soviet challenge and the most serious disintegration of the alliance since the war. They are asking difficult questions:

1. Who is going to read through, master and evaluate all the contending claims for money in the new budget and finally come up with a program that will redeem the mistakes of the past?

2. Who will call for the sacrifices, and perhaps even the austerity, necessary to pay for such a program and see that the sacrifices are not vitiated by disinterested, or inefficient, or divided officials in the Pentagon?

3. Who will provide the steady, consistent executive energy necessary to win consent from the people for such a program and get it through a Congress governed by the Democrats and studded with presidential candidates in an election year?

4. Who will pull together allied governments that are hesitant to make greater sacrifice themselves unless they see the President's Oklahoma speech translated into greater sacrifices here?

5. Who will revise the frozen U.S. policies in the Middle East and the Far East, and make a new beginning toward a limitation of armament with the Communist world?

These are some of the questions—there are many more—that well-informed men and women here have in mind when they talk of the exercise of presidential "powers and duties." Not the mere signing of papers and proclamations.

The constitutional convention placed great emphasis on what was accurately called "executive energy." Benjamin Franklin, among others, argued against a single executive in favor of a plural executive, but all, and particularly Alexander Hamilton, stressed the need for "executive energy" to settle and execute policy and to fix responsibility in the President himself.

DELEGATE IT?

This is the central question here now, as many objective observers see it: can the President provide that "executive energy" and if not, can he provide part of it, and delegate the rest of it to the vice president, who is the only other official elected by the whole people?

A third article in this series will deal with the possibilities of using the vice president more effectively in the formation and particularly the execution of policy, but meanwhile it should be noted what he is and is not doing.

He is sitting in more on policy formulation now than when the President had his heart attack in September of 1955 and his ileitis operation in June of 1956. He is assuming more of the President's ceremonial duties. He is easing some of the President's burdens as party leader. He is, when the President is absent, presiding over the cabinet and the national security council.

WAS OVERRULED

But he has not been given any actual executive responsibility such as President Roosevelt gave Vice President Henry Wallace at the board of Economic Warfare during the war. Indeed, when it was suggested at the start of this year that he be made chairman of the operations coordinating board, which has responsibility for providing "executive energy" to see that the policies of the national security council were actually carried out, the state department objected and the project was dropped.

Accordingly, the conduct of the executive is now left primarily in the hands of the cabinet, with the President approving rather than initiating policy, and Adams tending to decide when inter-departmental disputes should be submitted to the President for resolution.

When officials say that the President is able to do today what has to be done under the Constitution and can act about as he has acted when he was well, this is generally recognized here as being true. The point is that, under Eisenhower, we have had a "plural executive" through the cabinet most of the time, with the situation being different now only because the President is less active and the state of the nation and the alliance more serious.

HELMS WOBBLY ABROAD

Not only the leader of the United States, but the leader of the West German Federal republic, Dr. Konrad Adenauer, is ill. The French government is the 26th since the war and is trying, with uncertain support, to deal with an economic crisis at home and a debilitating political crisis which is occupying most of its army in Algeria.

Unlike Eisenhower, whose power still rests in his popularity outside the federal capital among the people, Prime Minister Macmillan is strong in the "Westminster Square Mile," the heart of political Britain, but weak in the country. And even the new Canadian government cannot be sure of the political continuity that usually characterizes executive political authority in Ottawa.

This is the situation that confronts the western heads of government as they approach the North Atlantic treaty meeting in Paris on Dec. 16. They have lost the political initiative to the Russians in the Middle East; they have lost the technological lead in the development of intermediate and long-range missiles. They have been told by their own scientists that the educational system in the West must be revolutionized if this scientific and technological lag is not to cover the whole field of missiles and rocketry in the next decade, and all are faced with serious political preoccupations at home.

These are some of the reasons why many objective observers here believe the time has come to talk and write soberly about the conduct of the alliance in general and the exercise of presidential leadership in particular.

It is recognized by all except the most partisan politicians in Washington that the outlook is too serious for political convenience, or timid half-measures. The simple fact, recognized by anybody who has a calendar, is that Eisenhower will be in office for three years and almost two months, during which time the whole balance of power between the free and Communist worlds will be at stake.

The question being debated here, therefore, is what can be done, all these factors being taken into account, to provide the "executive energy" that is necessary.

Spring Shoes Warm Up With Red Everywhere

By RAYMONDE ALEXANDER

Any way you turn next spring, you're going to see red. This warmest of all colors is warming up for a foot-long dash into the new season by showing up in nearly every conceivable shoe style.

In a recent showing of shoes held in Atlanta, where store buyers lay in their forward season supplies, the shoes in red appeared to be the corners.

"ANY COLOR . . .

As one gentleman said, "Any color as long as it's red will be a step in the right direction."

Why red? Well, for one thing it's gay, and you're always ready for gaiety after a somewhat somber winter.

But the major reason is that red is a natural to go with spring navy, black, beige and plaids, which are being forecast as the brilliant blendings to expect in ready-to-wear fashions.

See red in suede, in calf, or in patent. See it with high heels, medium, or just off the ground. It's in shoes simple and adorned. Many styles have it in combination with black patent or black grain trim.

SUEDE PUMP

One particularly elegant version of red is a suede pump with a high-standing throat on which a red and gold jewel sparkles. This is the kind of shoe that is style in a daring, yet subtly charming, manner.

Bows appear to be the niftiest way that shoe designers have found to equalize the long pointed silhouette, and they are bowing in profusely. Generally they are flat and tailored—rarely calling attention to themselves, but definitely a part of the creation.

While the closed look still reigns supreme, the sling back is coming back—notably again in red.

PRINTS, STRIPES

And this spring, shoes will again bloom in a profusion of prints and stripes.

Pump is the elected style with a new innovation of design pointing interest up the instep. The colorings are brilliant, vibrant and fresh. Their clarity will be just the dominating touch to accent spring lights and cruise brights.

The shoes mentioned are not yet available in Atlanta, but they will be soon. For shopping information call JA. 2-5050, Ext. 394, or send a self-addressed post card, stating date of story, to the Women's Department, The Atlanta Constitution.

A Call To Adventure

People who grow up on the gulf coast are accustomed to buried treasure hunters. In almost every little circle of friends there is somebody who is willing to prowls the beaches all hours of the night with all sorts of treasure detectors from the latest scientific device to a peachtree switch.

It's been years since anybody asked me to go on a buried treasure hunt and I would have sworn that I'd turn down such an invitation flat. Too many nights when I was a child were spent trailing friends of my family who had been guided by a dream or a voice from the grave to a cache of Spanish doubloons. We never saw a doubloon. Instead we collected sandpurs, mosquitoes and blistered hands.

I decided then that buried treasure was not for me and, furthermore, it wasn't so darned romantic that I'd miss sleep hearing about it. But a book by a former Atlantan has certainly changed my mind.

Maybe you've seen it: "Treasure Under the Sea" (Doubleday & Co., $4.50). The jacket gives the author's name as N. B. Stirling, but not many Atlantans are fooled. That's nobody but Nora, daughter of a well-loved Atlanta doctor, and sister of the famous tennis player, Alexa Stirling.

After I had stayed up a couple of nights reading with growing excitement of the millions and millions of dollars that are under the sea—all the way from Sir Francis Drake's 40 tons of silver to the Philippine Government's gold in Manila Bay—I sent off to New York for more information about the author. (Callie Huger of WSB was going to visit her, so this wasn't so difficult.)

Now I have heard from Miss Stirling. She is the author, many people will recall, of the sensitive and moving mental health plays which have been presented all over the country—one, "The Room Upstairs," by several local groups. Another, "Broken Circle," is to be put on by the Family Service Society in February.

"I know it is a far cry from plays about family life to a book about treasure, particularly since this deals with pirates and soldiers of fortune and fighting men in general, and most people look at me as if I were crazy," Miss Stirling admitted. "Their first question always is, 'How did you ever come to write about something like that?'"

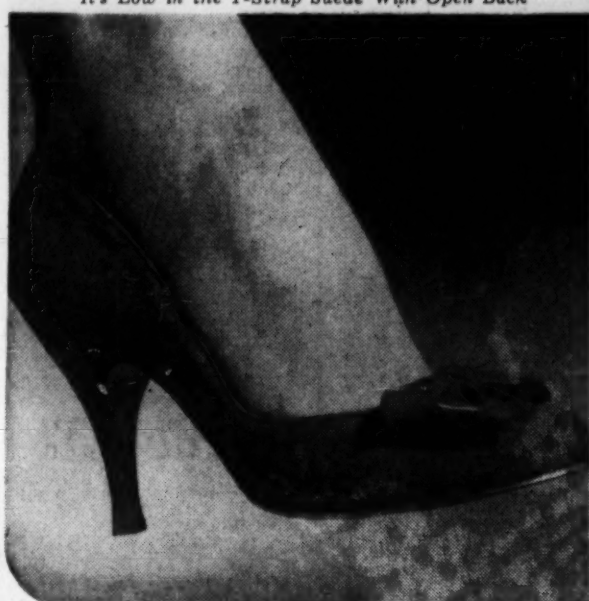

"The fact is that the book's jacket actually tells the truth. I did meet the Duke and Duchess of Argyll in London and, going to tea at their house, was regaled with fascinating tales of the famous sunken Tobermory galleon, the last existing relic of the Spanish Armada, which has been in the Argyll family since 1588. The Duke was at that time planning to make an attempt (the 21st by his family) to salvage the three million ducats, equal to at least $30,000,000, said to be lying in the sunken vessel. Later I wrote a piece about it for the New York Times Sunday Magazine and out of that came the suggestion that I do the book. It seems to be regarded as pretty odd of me, however, and Doubleday calls the author N. B. Stirling on the theory that men might be prejudiced against such a book written by a woman. Since sales, I am grateful to say, are very good, the rather contradictory photograph on the back seems to have been largely overlooked."

Miss Stirling doesn't get to Atlanta much since her mother moved away but she says she insists on hanging on to her native-daughter status and startles her New York friends by telling them that she was born in one of Atlanta's more famous buildings—the DeWitt Grand Opera House. ("They don't know that in those days there were apartments and offices upstairs, and my father, a young eye specialist, had his offices and home there.")

Her book is fascinating history and adventure and it will undoubtedly start new expeditions to wrest the treasure from what she calls "The Miser Sea." In fact, if I had time . . . who's got a frogman's suit they can spare till Christmas?

Off-Beat Colors Brighten Winter

This is the time of year when every woman wants a new colored dress of some sort to wear under winter coats and furs. This year, the newest and prettiest, too, candidates for this are silk prints in unusual new off-beat colors.

By "off-beat," I mean colors that are usually dulled or grayed a little but still definite colors, lovely dull tones of red, almond greens, grayed browns and beiges, soft, darkened blues.

Print designs are off-beat in type, too. Some abstract in which no set pattern may be traced, some definitely Oriental in type as Paisleys, some in all-over fused floral effects. In all, however, the first impression is of color, not design.

By AGNES GAINES

If you've lost your best set of false teeth, you might find them at the Atlanta Transit Co.'s lost and found department.

According to F. S. Perkins, who is in charge of the department, this is not as silly as it might sound. False teeth and partial plates are often turned in, along with other articles ranging from expensive jewelry and glasses to Bibles and whisky.

Women trolley riders are more forgetful than men, Mr. Perkins said. However, he qualified this rash statement by adding hastily that one good reason for this is that women do most of the shopping and therefore ride more often than men.

He estimated that 80 per cent of the articles found on trolleys are lost by women.

School children rank next in absentmindedness, leaving everything from books and jackets to baseball gloves and water pistols.

Among the approximately 40 articles turned in by the drivers every day, umbrellas and gloves are the most common. Men tend to lose billfolds more than anything else and women are most guilty of leaving umbrellas.

$1,600 IN CASH

Only about half of the lost merchandise is called for, Mr. Perkins stated. After an article has been held for 30 days, the operator who turned it in has 10 days in which to file his claim, if he wants it. The remainder is auctioned off as a single bundle to company employees.

Often there is a story behind the lost objects. Mr. Perkins related one incident about an elderly woman who carried her life's savings—a $1,000 bill, a $500 bill and a $100 bill—fastened to the lining of her billfold with a rusty safety pin. "She lost the billfold from her purse about three or four times," he recounted. "Every time she came down to claim it, we tried to persuade her to put the money in the bank or leave it at home, but she wouldn't do it."

"She must have finally, though, because she hasn't lost it recently."

Children often provoke a smile when they trustingly tell the driver they left a book, or jacket, on his bus and would he bring it tomorrow? Usually, however, it requires a trip to the transit company for identification.

OWNER NOTIFIED

The department makes every possible effort to get in touch with the owner if the article contains identification. When the article contains the owner's name and address, he is notified by mail.

Books are one of the major problems, and the company prefers to return these to the owner or to the school, who will return it to the owner. When identification is impossible the books are sent to the State Department of Education.

All guns or pistols are turned in to the police department, where they are checked for registration.

When businessmen lose important papers on the trolleys, the department makes a special effort to find the owner. Personal legal papers, such as divorce papers, also receive extra attention.

Robert Somerville, head of the company, underscored the honesty of the operators by relating several incidents concerning large sums of money left on buses and turned in to the supervisor.

"SAFEST PLACE"

"The safest place in Atlanta to lose something is on the trolley," he declared.

Certain articles are typical of certain days. For instance, Sundays usually bring a bumper crop of Bibles. The heaviest days are Friday and Saturday when women come downtown to shop.

Packages containing the day's purchases, and a various assortment of hats, gloves, pocket-books and coats, are most common on these days.

Week-end trips account for the fully packed suitcases and hat boxes that are turned in. And, of course, rainy days precipitate a deluge of umbrellas and raincoats.

The lost and found department has been operating "ever since there've been trolleys," Mr. Perkins said.

IF HE PROPOSES NOW—

He's Killing 2 Birds With One Diamond

By MARY PRIME

NEW YORK, Dec. 1 (U)—Now's the time of year when bridegrooms-to-be kill two birds with one stone—the diamond.

Chances are, girls who get engaged this month will get their rings for Christmas, reported the Jewelry Industry Council, which represents all branches of the business.

"Better resign yourself if he proposes now. He's trying to get out of buying two presents," said Albert A. Haase, council president.

Thirty-five per cent of all engagement rings are sold in December, and 40 per cent of all jewelers' business comes in the last three months of the year.

"DEFERRED RINGS"

Ten per cent of engagement rings are "deferred rings," purchased after five years of marriage when the husband can afford it and can't think of anything else to get his wife," said Haase.

One consolation—double-duty rings usually are larger and come as a surprise. Council figures showed that 85 per cent of ring buyers are men.

"Men choose three out of four rings," reported Daniel F. Dugan, head diamond salesman at Tiffany's. "They pick it out, say 'Here it is, my dear,' and that's that. I've watched the men for 49 years and they usually don't go wrong. They know their girls."

"EVER EXCHANGE?"

Do the women ever exchange rings?

"Only a few—for a larger stone," said Dugan. Men do most of the ring shopping at Harry Winston's, "but only married women return the rings. The single girls don't dare," said Winston.

The boys not only buy the rings, they buy them bigger. "Makes a man feel flush to buy a bigger ring than his fiancée or wife expects. If he combines two occasions, he can spend more," said Haase. Average price is $230.

Engagement diamonds now average 49 points or nearly 1/2 carat, compared to 40 points a few years ago.

Brilliant still top the list. Emerald-cut stones are gaining, then come the marquise, the heart shape, and the pear shape ("only trouble is, the girl doesn't know which way to wear it"), said Haase.

Yellow gold is the first choice for settings, then white gold, and platinum. Florentine gold finish is favored in the East. Biggest stones are sold in Oklahoma, Texas, California, New York City and Chicago.

WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q. 1—As South you hold:

♠ 6 ♥ J 9 7 ♦ 4 3 ♣ A Q J 10 9 8 5

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1 spade Pass 4 hearts Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Five hearts. Since a bid of 3 hearts would have been forcing, it may be presumed that partner's jump is based on a very strong holding. Your hand should produce several tricks and a raise over game is recommended. If partner has diamond and spade controls, he can bid six.

Q. 2—As South you hold:

♠ 9 4 3 ♥ J 8 5 ♦ K 10 6 2 ♣ A 6 5

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1 spade Double 7

What do you bid now?

A.—Holding eight points and a balanced hand, it behooves you to take some mild action during the auction, and this is just about the only time you can expect to be able to do so with safety. Bid one no trump.

Q. 3—As South you hold:

♠ A K 10 6 ♥ A J 4 3 ♦ A Q J 10 7

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1 club Pass 1 heart Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Even opposite a shaded response, we would insist upon game with this holding and therefore recommend a jump shift of two spades. Bear in mind that a rebid of one spade would not be forcing upon responder.

Q. 4—As South you hold:

♠ 8 4 ♥ A K 9 8 5 ♦ Q J 2 ♣ J 3 5

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1 heart Pass 1 spade Pass

1 no trump Pass 3 clubs Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Three hearts. This is preferable to a rebid of three no trump, for although you already have shown a balanced hand and the ability to play no trump, you have not yet shown that you have a rebiddable heart suit, and this is the appropriate time to do so.

Q. 5—As South you hold:

♠ 6 ♥ K Q 10 9 4 ♦ A Q 6 3 ♠ A K 5

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1 heart Pass 2 clubs Pass

3 diamonds Pass 3 spades Pass

4 clubs Pass 4 diamonds Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—This is an ideal spot for the Blackwood convention, and a four no trump bid is recommended. If partner can be found with two aces and a king, a grand slam contract at clubs should be within reach. Inasmuch as partner bid the suit freely, it is reasonable to assume that clubs are solid.

Q. 6—North-South have 40 part score, and as South you hold:

♠ A 9 7 4 ♥ A Q 9 6 2 ♦ A Q 8 2

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1 heart Pass 1 no trump Pass

2 diamonds Pass 2 no trump Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Because a game contract has been reached, we suggest a pass, despite the fact that this is not the type of hand with which we normally relish a no-trump contract. It is reasonable to suppose that partner's principal values will be found in the club suit. That conclusion is reached on the following line of reasoning: Partner has not a representative four card spade suit, else he would have mentioned it at the level of one. Partner surely has no support for hearts, else he would have bid them, and preference because he failed to accept diamonds, it is clear that he must have values in clubs. An effort to find a new parking place with a bid of three spades would be highly unsound and extremely dangerous.

Q. 7—Partner opens with one spade and you hold:

♠ 8 4 ♥ K 6 2 ♦ A 7 3 ♣ Q 7 5 4 2

What is your response?

A.—This balanced hand containing only nine points in high cards is not strong enough for a response of two clubs, and the proper response is one no trump.

Q. 8—As dealer you hold:

♠ A K 4 ♥ A Q J 10 ♣ A K J 4

What is your opening bid?

A.—Two spades. This is a rare hand on which an opening bid may be made on a four card suit. The hand contains 26 points, or a game in hand. The opening bid is made in spades to allow the economical showing of all three suits.

NERVOUS STOMACH TROUBLE

We must recognize that food habits are a mixture of habit, convenience and pressure of salesmanship. So we must take heed and eat sensibly and put into our stomachs a fairly well-balanced diet of fruits, vegetables, proteins and carbohydrates. Czech President Frees Hundreds VIENNA, Austria, Dec. 1 (AP)—Czechoslovakia's new president, Antonin Novotny, has proclaimed an amnesty that will free hundreds of prison inmates, Radio Prague reported today. Persons convicted of political crimes, such as plotting against the state, are excluded.

The announcement said Novotny made the gesture as a reward to the Czechoslovak people "for displaying national unity during our trying period" connected with the death of his predecessor, Antonin Zapotocky, Nov. 13. Novotny, who is also first secretary of Czechoslovakia's Communist party, was named Zapotocky's successor Nov. 19.

The amnesty frees prisoners serving terms up to three years and prisoners under 16 years of age.

Jubilant Georgia players had dunked beaming Coach Wallace Butts under a shower, dressed and departed to join in the Saturday celebration they had set off by whipping Georgia Tech.

Student managers were packing away the paraphernalia for the last time and the 1957 season and another Georgia and Tech classic was history. Only one Georgia player remained in the near empty dressing room. Fullback Theron Sapp, the man of the hour, was lying on the training table, and Dr. Marion Hubert was stitching his chin.

Outlar

Sapp, a rugged young man who refused to let a broken neck end his football career, is as tough as they come. As needle pierced skin, he nonchalantly asked, "How did Alabama and Auburn come out?"

At the time no one in the dressing room knew the final score in Birmingham, but practically everyone in Atlanta knew what had happened at Grant Field. Georgia enthusiasts, who had waited since 1948 to yell it, were screaming the final score all over town.

It took a terrific team effort by the Bulldogs, and a super individual effort by Sapp to snap the long chain of disenchantment. It also took one of the finest coaching jobs a Georgia staff ever rendered.

Georgia Tech, the nation's third ranking defensive team, was popping leather, but Sapp was operating on the theory that a man who won't be stopped can't be. He slammed into the Tech line 23 times and emerged with a net total of 91 yards. Thirty-four yards were accumulated on the game-winning drive, which handyman Sapp had set up via a fumble recovery.

Though Sapp gained many yards on his own, he had superb blocking support. Cicero Lucas, Dave Lloyd, Nat Dye and company earned the decision up front. Sapp became the first back to enter the Tech end zone in six games in Grant Field. On the scoring play, which produced Georgia's first TD in four years against the Jackets, end Ken Cooper and Jimmy Orr applied key blocks.

—Dupree Earned Eagle Badge as a Scout

Space doesn't permit individual applause for the entire Bulldog cast. Quarterback Charley Britt had his best day; George Guisier played a big hand in mending the leaky pass defense; Lloyd provided further evidence that he's the finest Georgia center since Bill Godwin and Clyde Ehrhardt. You can go right on down the line.

It should be noted that the Georgia ends, blasted all season as the weak link in the line, put on a sparkling defensive exhibition. Jimmy Vickers and Cooper played 40 minutes, and Gordon Kelly, Bobby Towns and Aaron Box were capable stand-ins.

Don't forget to cut in Coach Sterling Dupree for a large slice of the victory melon. He did a masterful scouting job on Tech. A striking example of Dupree's report was pinpointed in the first quarter.

Tech was knocking at the Georgia 20, with second and two situation. Dupree had constantly warned that Fred Braselton likes to surprise by passing on second down and short yardage.

End Jimmy Vickers and Sapp recalled Dupree's instructions and fired through to drop Braselton for a key 11-yard loss. That play was as important as Britt's pass to Jimmy Orr on the TD march.

Statistics tell you that this was the worst Georgia team since 1932. But the 1957 Bulldogs won't be remembered as a team that won three games and lost seven. They will be remembered as a courageous outfit that refused to quit and jelled into a fine football team at the wire. They will be remembered as the team which came within three yards of knocking Auburn off its No. 1 perch, as the team which ended the eight-year famine against Georgia Tech.

—The Gentleman Waited Eight Years To Call

The Georgia team Saturday displayed more poise, finesse and class than any Bulldog edition in recent years. It bore no resemblance to the fumble-frustrated outfit which lost to Texas in the opener on the same turf.

It was a hard-hitting, hard-nosed club which asked for no quarter and gave none. And it beat a tough Tech crew, who played a good defensive game. As Coach Bobby Dodd, an infrequent and gracious loser, pointed out. This Georgia team came a long way from September to November.

After gift-wrapping a victory for Sugar Bowl-bound Texas via fumbles and penalties, Georgia lost a heartbreaking 9-6 decision to Vandy. Michigan then administered a 26-0 thrashing, and the Bulldogs were on the ropes.

They struggled to a 13-6 victory over Tulane in one of their worst performances. Then, after spotting Navy a 21-0 bulge at intermission, the Bulldogs came back and battled the Cotton Bowl-bound Middies off their feet.

I thought that was the turning point; that Georgia had arrived. Coach Blanton Collier of Kentucky agreed after Georgia galloped to a 33-14 decision over the Wildcats. Then came the Alabama debacle, followed by what I considered the low point of the season—the 22-0 lashing by Florida.

Here was the spot for the Bulldogs to turn in their battle cards. Instead they came back with a fierce performance against Auburn and backed it with the great game Saturday. So despite the 3-7 record, this is a Georgia team which will be respected.

Wallace Butts, one of the leading coaches in football, was no greater stranger, who used to drop by in the bowl days, showed up at Butts' suite in the Biltmore Saturday night. His daughter, Jean Butts Jones, chilled one of the infrequent visitors.

After bestowing congratulations on Wally, the gentleman turned to Jean and remarked, "It sure is nice to see you again."

"It's nice to see you, sir," Jean replied. "I haven't seen you in eight years."

COIN TOSSED, TIDE FELL

Auburn Chose To Defend—And It Scored

By AL THOMY

Auburn captain Tim Baker and alternate captain Jimmy Phillips decided Alabama's fate, as it were, in the pre-game gambling ritual.

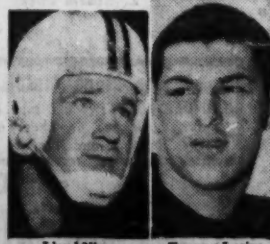

They called the coin toss, took the wind side and gleefully elected to go on defense immediately if not sooner. This 1957 undefeated, untied and unscored upon on the ground Auburn team was one which loved to knock.

Just 1:56 after Billy Atkins kicked off into the end zone, Auburn had its first touchdown. Two Alabama plays, a fumble, Tommy Lorio's quick 28-yard dash and Atkins' plunge and point, 7-0. That quick.

The Crimson Tide came to Legion Field conceding the infantry battle to the Tigers.

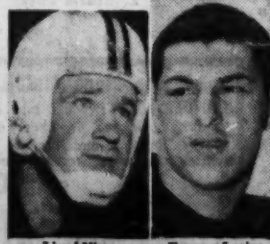

Jackie Burkett

Tommy Lorio

Coach J. B. (Ears) Whitworth and his staff plotted an aerial bombardment and even pulled out the old SMU spread, which regularly pops up in college and pro ranks in desperation circumstances.

Thirty-two times the Tide put the ball into the air and five times the Plainsmen took it out.

Lloyd Nix

One series of Bama downs in the second quarter went like this: Quarterback Bobby Smith passed seven to Willie Beck to Auburn 46. He zeroed in Clay Walls on the 34. He then hit Lorio for 79 yards and an Auburn TD.

Later he passed to center Jackie Burkett for 66 yards and another TD—for Auburn.

On Saturday the nation's No. 1 team employed the most successful pass defense ever devised—interceptions. Lorio, a young man who's been having tough sliding in seven mud games, was his old slippery self again. He made his first interception of the season, his second and his third. He averaged over 14 yards per carry on the ground.

"This is the kind of day I like," he said after the game. "Cool and a dry track. I just felt like I was going to have a good day."

"Lorio is my defensive quarterback," said assistant coach Hal Herring. "He called the shots on the first unit and we had Pat Meagher to do the

'More Automatic' Label Hung On Bulldog Cagers

By MICKEY LOGUE

It takes hours, weeks, months—and sometimes years—of practice in preciseness to win basketball games by doing what comes naturally.

Georgia's veteran Bulldogs have paid the price for "automaticness" and hope to reap a victory dividend this season.

Coach Harbin (Red) Lawson's bounce-bailers took more than their share of buffetings last year. A schedule filled with perilous evenings could mean more of the same in 1957-58. South Carolina may measure the Bulldogs in their first start at Charlotte, N.C., Monday night.

However, the Gamecocks will have to do it over the vigorous objections of lanky lads in Red and Black and over their new automatic weapon.

"No use lying about it, we have more talent and are some taller this season," Lawson said Sunday. "We may not win a lot more ball games, but we look like a good basketball team. And a big reason is because we do a lot of team stuff more automatically, better than we've ever done it before.

"It's hard to win many games when players have to think before making a move that should come naturally. I've had these boys a lot longer and they're doing things real neat like."

Besides the more automatic nature of their play, the Bulldogs will be equipped with better scoring weapons this year. Lawson calls the expanded system a "multiple offense."

"We feel we can put great pressure on any defense we play," he said. Know-how is the most potent kayo punch Georgia has going in its corner. Some ten guys are around who have played the "Lawson system" one or more seasons, and experience is a commodity that even talent can't buy.

Posey: 'Line Played Perfect'

By BERT PRATHER

Big Wyatt Posey, Georgia's affable and capable line coach, probably hit the nail squarely on the head in summing up this year's University of Georgia football team.

"We had a pretty fair football club all along but we were plagued by mistakes and bad luck. And of course, you can't overlook the fact that we were playing a mighty tough schedule. You couldn't make mistakes against the teams we played and not get hurt. And we had a young ball club that was bound to make errors."

"They really got going against Auburn two weeks ago and out there Saturday against Tech. Boy, that was the one. Our line didn't make a mistake against Tech."

THERON SAPP And He'll Be Back

turned to join the Bulldog grid staff, took over to say a word about his backfield pupils. "I don't believe you could have asked more from a back than fullback Theron Sapp delivered. And quarterback Charley Britt followed our battle plans to a T. All of them played fine ball," Rauch concluded.

Incidentally, Sapp gained 91 yards against Tech to bring his season's total to 599 on 137 carries. That's good enough to put him among the SEC's elite and make him the biggest Bulldog ground gainer in recent years.

Coach Butts, who has been subjected to much unjust criticism during Georgia's lean years and eight straight losses to Tech, is to be commended for doing one of his finest coaching jobs with this club.

And maybe the future will be even brighter since only nine varsity men are seniors and some mighty fine boys are coming up from the undefeated frosh. And that fellow Sapp still has another year.

Bulldogs who bowed out Saturday were quarterback Billy Hearn, halfbacks captain J. R. Davis, Henry Dukes and Jimmy Orr, fullbacks Wilbur Lofton and Joe Comfort, guard Travis Vinesett, tackle Mike Weatheringham and end Ken Cooper.

Georgia Tech's Bobby Dodd, who is just as fine a loser as he is a winner, though he's had much more experience winning in recent years, had nothing but praise for neighbor Wally and the Bulldogs.

He also praised his own Jackets for their fine effort, just as he has all season. The Jacket boss realized that this young squad was rated much higher than it should have been at start of season. It's 4-4 record is not much off what Dodd predicted at the start of campaign. Injury to

49ers Smash Hopes For Giant Repeat

Frisco Bumps Champs, 27-17

NEW YORK, Dec. 1 (AP)—The rampaging San Francisco 49ers remained in the tight scramble for the Western Conference title in the National Football League today, slapping down New York, 27-17, and all but ruining the Giants' hopes for another world championship.

Y. A. Tittle, the 49ers' field general, engineered the upset as the fumbling Giants never could get their high-powered offense into gear before a crowd of 54,121—largest of the season at Yankee Stadium.

Five fumbles in the first half, three by quarterback Charley Conerly and two by Frank Gifford, kept the Giants in hot water and made things easier for Tittle and his scrappy westerners.

The Giant defeat, plus Cleveland's victory over the Chicago Cardinals, left New York in a difficult position with only two games to play. Cleveland now has eight victories against one defeat and a tie, while the Giants are 7-3 in the Eastern Conference battle.

San Francisco, on the other hand, stayed in the western contention, tied with the Detroit Lions for second place, one game behind the Baltimore Colts who held on to first place by whipping the Los Angeles Rams.

After Babb, a rookie fullback from Austin College, scored the first touchdown of the game on an 8-yard run with only 23 seconds left in the first period, New York came back to tie it at 7-7 in the opening stages of the second quarter.

That came on an 80-yard drive, climaxed by Alex Webster's plunge over the middle from the one. The 49ers came right back on Perry's 3-yard touchdown smash, and Soltan's first field goal, and the Giants were never able to catch up again.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 1 (AP)—A second period touchdown pass from quarterback Sonny Jurgensen to Dick Bielski and Bobby Walston's conversion lifted the Philadelphia Eagles to a 7-6 victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers today in a National Football League game at Connie Mack Stadium.

The Eagles, in winning their fourth game against six defeats, blanked the opposition in touch-

Consider the starting five Lawson has on the ready line for South Carolina, providing all practice injuries have healed. Forwards Fred Franks and Sonny Poss, guards Fred Edmondson and Ray Allen and center Henry Cabaniss all have earned letters at Georgia.

Joe DuFour and Don Hartsfield stand ready to contribute vital relief work, and Bill Ensley, who had to miss school and basketball last year, probably will crash the starting unit when he becomes eligible Dec. 19, night of the game with Georgia Tech.

Bobby Cheney and Harold Krafchick lend added experienced depth to the backcourt corps.

Further bolstering the Bulldogs are junior college transfers Norman Hill and John Hart of Georgia Southwestern, and 6-5 Earl Tidwell, a graduate of Brewton-Parker Junior College.

Poss and Allen are hampered by charley horses and either may be replaced in the first five by Tidwell.

"The boys have hit 40 per cent as a team in scrimmages," Lawson said, "but they weren't playing under the emotional strain of a game and may fall off considerably."

Allen (6-2) and Ensley (6-5) have been firing at a 50 per cent clip. Allen led the scorers with a 14.5 average last year, and Cabaniss (6-5) followed with a 12.7 rate. Ensley averaged 13.9 per game two seasons ago.

Lawson said he wouldn't settle on his lineup for the opener until just before the game. Much will depend on the height of South Carolina's starting selections.

If Coach Frank Johnson sends in skyscrapers, Tidwell, Poss (6-4), Cabaniss and Franks are almost certain to be in there somewhere.

"One coach told me that Johnson said this is South Carolina's best team in 17 years," Lawson said. "They must have some real talent if they're any better than Grady Wallace." Wallace scored 54 points in one duel with the Bulldogs.

TECH'S LITTLE SHARPSHOOTERS BRING KNOWING GRIN TO COACH WHACK HYDER'S FACE
Co-Captain Terry Randall (L) and Guard Buddy Bud Blemker Aim Grins of Their Own at Camera

Blemker and Randall Keeping Jacket Cage Foes on Guards

6-6 Center Is Fifth Man

When you talk guards in South-eastern Conference basketball circles this season, you start with Bud Blemker and Terry Randall, the half-pint terrors from Georgia Tech.

And that's about as good a spot as any to launch a discussion on what the immediate future holds for Coach Whack Hyder's Yellow Jackets.

If last season's sharpshooting was a prelude to finer marksmanship in '58, the 5-10 tandem assures banner things in Tech's backcourt.

Tennessee's Emmett Lowery called Blemker and Randall the "best shooting guards" he's ever seen. Last season, they were chosen to follow his lead. Center Lenny Cohen, a vicious rebounder, and Kimmel left the big shoes Tech will have to fill this season.

Blemker cashed in 33.3 per cent of his free throws and 38.3 per cent of his field goals in putting 426 points. Randall strided from the floor at a 44.2 per cent rate and made good $2.0 of his foul shots.

This season? "Blemker has had a throat infection," said Gilbreath, "but he should be ready for Davidson here Tuesday. Bud's the same old Bud. He's the clutch boy, the fellow who'll beat you in the last seconds. They concentrate on offense in Indiana, but he has made lots of defensive improvement."

"Randall gets his shots off a lot quicker than last year; he's very similar to Blemker actually."

From Randall and Blemker, you move to returnees Gary Phillips and Jim Johnson. They and Randall are the co-captains. When three-time captain Bobby Kimmel departed last spring, three were chosen to follow his lead.

Center Lenny Cohen, a vicious rebounder, and Kimmel left the big shoes Tech will have to fill this season.

"Phillips will have to do the job on the boards that Kimmel

Big Dome Duo Among Best

did last year," Gilbreath continued, "and he'll have to take up a lot of the defensive slack Bobby left. He'll draw a lot of good tall boys that ordinarily a 6-4 player would have to take."

"We're counting on Randall to replace Kimmel as the enthusiast, the get-up-and-go-type player. Actually, Randall, Phillips and Johnson at different times will have to supply what Kimmel gave us. Johnson will be the 'calmer-downer.'"

"We have four experienced boys who will have to carry the load," Gilbreath said. "That 'fifth man' and depth are our top problems this year."

Who'll play center? Hyder and Gilbreath have a king-sized clue. He stands 6-6 in sweat socks and answers to the name of Frank Imman. He is a big sophomore basketballwise, having been held out for seasoning last year.

"Frank made 51 per cent of his field goals as a freshman," Gilbreath said. "He didn't have much high school experience. I didn't see Cohen as a sophomore, but I would guess they're developing at about the same pace. Imman's rebounding and jump shooting are his prime assets. He doesn't use his strength as well as Lenny did."

If Imman comes through as Hyder and Gilbreath hope he will, Tech's problem eventually may be where to play the "sixth man" rather than who'll be the fifth. If this sounds confusing, it is. Add sophomore Dave Denton to the picture, and it comes into focus.

Hyder considers sophomore Denton potentially the best player he has had at Tech. The 6-2½ Kentuckian can do it all: Unfortunately, his battle with the books hasn't been as successful as his duels with opposing basketball teams.

Denton is supposed to become eligible Dec. 14. All Tech fingers are crossed.

"He'll answer all our problems," Gilbreath enthused.

kicking ace Joe DeLany may have altered the record a bit.

The Jackets will lose nine by graduation, including first stringers Jerry Nabors and Ted Smith, ends: Stan Flowers, left halfback; Leon Askew, guard, and captain and all-American center Don Stephenson. Departing from the second unit will be guard Dan Theodocion and quarterback Charlie Maynard, and from the third combine, end Paul Vickers and halfback and kicking specialist Bobby Dover.

This is the first time in six years the Jackets will not be playing in a post-season bowl classic. However, coach Dodd will keep his string going. The Tech boss will coach the South team in the annual Miami North and South game Christmas night. Stephenson and Nabors will be among his all-star charges.

Stephenson has also been invited to the Hula Bowl, while Nabors has accepted an invitation to play in the Senior Bowl at Mobile.

Although, with a year's experience under their belts, Tech's '58 sophomores will be hard to dislodge next year, they may have to make room for some of the boys moving up from the frosh. Gerald Burch, an end from Mobile, Ala., may develop into one of the finest kickers to show at Tech since Dave Davis. Chick Granger, Reggie Logan, Ronnie Lewis, Marvin Tibbels, Ben Smith, Snooks Saye and Frank Nix are a few who may bear watching.

Auburn Looks to National Title; Rebels and Vols Bound for Bowls

By MERCER BAILEY

Auburn owned its first Southeastern Conference football championship today and staked an impressive claim to the mythical national crown with the greatest defensive team since Tennessee's fabled 1939 outfit.

The Tigers, accused of lacking a big-league scoring punch, rolled up 34 points in the first half Saturday and closed their finest season with a 40-0 rout of Alabama. They finished with a 10-0 record and in seven SEC games yielded only seven points.

Mississippi State, only conference member to score on Auburn, fished the Tigers into sole possession of the title by deadlocking Mississippi 7-7. The Maroons missed two field-goal attempts in the second half, each of which probably would have carried them into the Sugar Bowl. Mississippi, knocked from a first-place tie by the deadlock, got the nod from the New Orleans folks immediately after the game. The Rebels will play Texas in the Jan. 1 extravaganza.

Tennessee recovered from a six-point halftime deficit to beat Vanderbilt, 20-6, and accepted a Gator Bowl date with Texas A&M Dec. 28. The rest of the SEC teams will spend the holidays at home.

Auburn, in the NCAA doghouse for recruiting violations, was not eligible for a postseason junket.

Louisiana State belted Tulane, 25-6; Georgia downed Georgia Tech, 7-0, and Florida beat Miami, 14-0, in other traditional windup games. LSU fullback Jimmy Taylor romped for two touchdowns and was the league's top scorer with 86 points, four more than Auburn fullback Billy Atkins, who finished with two touchdowns and four conversions.

Bobby Gordon, Tennessee tailback, keyed the Vol comeback win over Vandy by scoring twice and wound up third in the scoring race with 54 points. Florida halfback Bernie Parrish, limited to a pair of conversions against Miami, was fourth with 44. Mississippi quarterback Ray Brown and Mississippi State fullback Molly Halbert were next with 42 each. Neither scored in the final game.

Halfback Tommy Lorino, only a shadow of his 1956 self until Saturday, had his finest day for Auburn. The junior speedster from Bessemer raced 79 yards for one score after intercepting a pass, had runs of 28 and 25 yards to set up other touchdowns, and crunched a 21-yard pass.

same on the second. Burkett and Billy Austin did the same for the line.

"No, the spread didn't surprise us. We enter a game prepared for any offense. Florida State sprung the spread on us."

Herring understandably was proud of his defensive gladiators.

"Burkett and (Zeke) Smith were especially effective but you have to give credit all down the line. If there's an underrated position on the team it's our tackle. We've shifted them around and they've all done the job."

Young Smith, 6-2 and 210, also impressed Whitworth.

"I have watched Smith in seven game movies," said Whit, "and I honestly believe he's one of the best linemen in the South. Rugged in the middle? Let me tell you something, he's rugged anywhere on that field."

No story of Auburn's 40-0 mauling of the Tide can be completed without a word on a halfback-turned-quarterback, Lloyd

L. G. Massey Agency Offers Large Savings to Car Buyers

'State Farm'
Bank Plan
Saves Money

"When you trade cars, don't trade your automobile insurance.
Save money the State Farm bank plan way," says L. G. Massey, local agent, State Farm Insurance Companies. "Savings are secured two ways. First, you save on your automobile insurance; and second, you save on low-cost bank financing, which Mr. Massey can arrange for you.

Mr. Massey suggests that if you are going to trade cars and would like it financed at the lowest possible cost, contact him or your local bank. He will be glad to handle this with your bank for you. Many people are saving up to $100 in financing their cars in following his suggestion.

The State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Company insures more cars than any other company in the world. Lower rates and conscientious service to customers has made this possible.
State Farm strives to insure only careful drivers. This serves to reduce the number of claims and keeps State Farm rates low.

Whenever claims do arise, however, they are handled in a courteous, prompt and friendly way.
On this firm basis of service, Mr.
Massey is the leading agent of the 7,500 State Farm agents in the United States and Canada.

In addition to automobile insurance, L. G. Massey, through State
Farm Fire and State Farm Life Insurance Co.'s, offers a full line of fire and life insurance. "On fire insurance," Mr. Massey states, "our company offers a 15

the South's largest manufacturers today extends a cordial invitation to all retail diamond merchants to visit the showrooms now and make their selections for Christ-

Simultaneously, Dan Geller, head of the firm, announced today that "new holiday merchan-be made on practically all items, he said.

President Model Above Has 225 HP. Engine, New Suspension and Finned Brakes

U.S. Sales Of Cotton Cloth Dip

NEW YORK, Dec. 1 (AP)—Sales of cloth slowed down considerably in the cotton textile market during the past week. The situation became somewhat nominal in character after mid-week because of the four-day closing for the Thanksgiving by print cloth mills.

This action, aimed at reducing production to meet demand, was followed in varying degrees by mills in the wool and synthetic goods fields. Prospect for this cut-back was credited in part for the substantial buying that developed in gray cotton goods last week.

Commenting on the lull, a representative of a large mill group said the market "is taking a breather" after recent stepped-up buying, mainly of print cloths and broadcloths.

He said cloth users were apparently unwilling to pay the higher prices now asked by mills but he predicted converters would become reconciled to them. The mills, he added, have no recourse but to boost quotations because of the stiff rise in the cost of raw cotton arising from weather damage to the 1957 crop.

Car Output Rises, Giving Hope for Steel

CLEVELAND, Dec. 1 (AP)—Hope of an early pickup in orders for steel is being sparked by increasing production of automobiles, Steel Magazine said today.

"Latest reports show auto output running about 30 percent better than it did a year ago," the metalworking week-end said. "Figures for the latest week place output above the 154,000 cars for the first time since late in December last year."

The magazine said steel buying for December is "hand to mouth," but that sellers are encouraged by a slight improvement in consumer interest in requirements for the first quarter of 1958.

Horsepower Is Soft-Pedaled But Increases in '58 Models

By DAVID J. WILLKIE

DETROIT, Dec. 1 (AP)—Horsepower as a promotion factor is taboo among the car makers now, but engines developed for 1958 cars generally are more powerful than their predecessors.

Among the low-priced makes, there are 24-horsepower ratings. Five of these are in six-cylinder engines ranging from 101 to 145 horsepower and 19 in the V8 group range from 180 to 305 horsepower. Ford's continental Mark III has a new engine that develops 375 horsepower; the Mercury line has four new overhead valve engines with power ratings going as high as 400 horsepower.

DE-EMPHASIS, NOT CUT

These new power plants, of course, were blue-printed long before the auto makers voted to soft-pedal power and speed in promoting their cars. But the car builders made no promises to cut down on horsepower; merely to de-emphasize it in their advertising.

Numerous other engines designed for future models also were on the drafting boards when the industry voted to tone down reference to power and speed. So engines even more powerful than those now in use will appear in 1959 and 1960 model cars.

The so-called horsepower race apparently has been sidetracked. But nobody associated with the making of car engines will say there is a set limit to the power that can be built into a conventional automobile engine.

POWER ACCESSORIES

Power output has to be higher today than it was a decade or so ago because of the numerous accessories now power-operated. These include power steering and power brakes, air conditioning

Red China Drafts 18, 19-Year-Olds

HONG KONG, Dec. 1 (AP)—A call-up to military service of 18 and 19-year-olds in Red China began today and will be completed by the end of February under orders of the state council, Peiping radio said.

The broadcast also said that during this period those who entered service after Nov. 1, 1954 will be demobilized. Earlier announcements said 620,000 men had been demobilized this year and had taken posts in agricultural cooperatives.

In April Mao Tse-tung was quoted as saying Red China had three million men under arms.

Building Union Bolt Threat Sags

NEW YORK, Dec. 1 (AP)—The threat of a bolt of 3,000,000 building trades unionists from the merged labor federation began to peter out tonight.

The heads of the powerful construction unions told Richard J. Gray, president of the AFL-CIO building trades department, to tone down the secession threat he had planned to make at the opening of the department's biennial convention in Atlantic City, N.J., tomorrow.

Gray was reported rewriting the keynote talk, which he had circulated among members of the department's executive board last week. The advance text had contained a warning that the building unions would walk out if their long-standing dispute with industrial unions over jurisdictional rights was not settled to their satisfaction.

The Gray draft was said also to have denounced the proposed expulsion of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters from the federation as "un-American." The speech called on delegates from the construction unions to vote against the ouster at the convention of the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations, which opens in Atlantic City Thursday. It was believed that the tone-down order also would affect this part of the Gray keynote.

No formal announcement was made at the close of a meeting of the executive board of the building group in the seaside resort late today. But board members said any possibility of secession had been quashed.

OUR NEGRO COMMUNITY

$74,000 Was Raised For AME Last Year

By CLAUDE GEORGE SR.

More than $74,000 was raised during the past year by member churches of the five districts comprising the Atlanta Georgia AME Conference, H. I. Bearden, state AME accountant, reported at the conference's annual meeting here.

About 3,000 persons poured into the main auditorium at Big Bethel AME Church to hear Bishop William R. Wilkes, AME bishop for the state, speak at the final session on "Visions of a New Day."

At least 150 classes made reports during the Sunday school session conducted by Supt. W. J. Rowe and reviewed by J. R. Coon.

H. C. Carswell served as master of ceremonies for the regular order of worship with Bishop Wilkes delivering the ordination sermon. Music was furnished by the combined choirs of St. Paul and Big Bethel churches.

Reverends who were ordained as elders were Ebenezer Boston Woods, S. T. Hughey, Solomon Giles, Michael Nathaniel Jones, Ben Fortson Jr. and Charles Melvin Jackson.

Ordained as deacons were James Foster, Alexander Dunlap, Reginald Carter, John Eppes and Lawney Horton.

The conference voted to hold its 1958 session at Antioch AME Church in Decatur with T. J. Flanagan and the Rev. Benjamin Gay as host presiding elder and minister.

Appointed by Bishop Wilkes as presiding elders for the five districts were:

S. H. Rome, Atlanta district; H. C. Carswell, South Atlanta district; T. J. Davis, West Atlanta district; J. S. Downs, Griffin district; and T. J. Flanagan, Monticello district.

Morehouse Lecturer

Dr. Paul I. Clifford, Atlanta University registrar, told the Hungry Club's weekly public forum that "every sound-thinking citizen" should consider a recent testing service report showing Negro students "progressively behind" whites in Atlanta.

"There were bound to be large differences between the two racial groups when one group has been struggling for years under a deep-seated segregation system," Clifford said.

Report on Students

Dr. Butler A. Jones, sociology professor at Ohio Wesleyan University, will be the third guest speaker in the annual fall lecture series sponsored by the sociology department at Morehouse College.

Jones' opening lecture will be delivered at 4 p.m. Tuesday in the Chemistry Building and will deal with "Sociology, Segregation and the Supreme Court." At 4 p.m. Wednesday he will speak

Drinks Blamed After Banquet

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaya, Dec. 1 (UP)—The Kuala Lumpur health officer was ordered today to investigate reports that more than 30 guests at the recent state banquet for Japanese Prime Minister Nobusuke Kishi were taken ill after the meal.

The investigation was ordered by municipal authority after reports that the guests, including the wife of Malayan Premier Tunku Abdul Rahman, had suffered severe stomach pains.

Health Officer J. F. McGarity said the stomach pains were not necessarily caused by food poisoning. "It could be due to mixed drinks," he said.

It was reported that about five kinds of wines, including champagne, were served during the banquet.

A Primer for the Space Age

Staking Out a Claim on Moon May Require Approval of U.N.

By WILLY LEY

About two days after Sputnik started on its endless race around the earth, a councilman in Texas introduced a motion to make it illegal for the Russian satellite to fly over his city. Nothing came of the motion because nobody seconded it.

The public, reading about the Ninth of a Series incident, smiled, grinned or laughed out loud, because it seemed such a strange idea. The strangest fact about it, which the public could not realize, was that the motion itself may have been illegal. But the man who made it had a point, insofar as there are legal aspects even to travel in space.

Once you think of the idea that there might be such legal aspects, several legal questions will occur almost at once. Supposing the Republic of Greater Oceania succeeds in dropping its flag on the moon. Does that make the moon its property? Or suppose a British spaceship, taking off for space, passes over Spanish territory. Can Spain object?

As a matter of fact, quite a good deal already has been written on space law. Among the first was a paper by Oscar Schachter of the U.N. Legal Department, presented in 1951 at the first Hayden Planetarium Symposium on Space Travel.

Schachter said at the time that legal logic demanded that space outside the earth should be regarded like the open sea, available to all for use but belonging to none.

Many other law experts, especially specialists in international and in sea law, who have spoken about this subject since, are in agreement with this point of view. But there are certain difficulties, the main one being that one cannot reach space without going through the atmosphere first. And much of the atmosphere is "owned" by the various nations: the legal term is that they have "sovereignty over their air space."

Every nation can do what it pleases in the air space over its country, and this right extends for three miles off shore into the sea if the nation borders an ocean. This so-called three-mile zone is a well-known and generally accepted "property" of the country.

The interesting legal point is, however, that a nation's ownership, or sovereignty, over these three miles of ocean water is not absolute. If a ship must sail through somebody's three-mile zone in order to get from one part of the open sea to another part, it can do so without asking permission. It has what is called "the right of innocent passage." This is a right, not something up to the kindness of the proprietor.

HOW THEY REASON

Logic demands, the law experts say, that there should be something like that in the air too. Generally speaking their reasoning goes like this:

The bottom layer of the air space over a country should be the absolute property of this country. Nobody can use it, except by special permission or by a general agreement between two or more countries. The next higher layer should still be the property of the country, but with the right of innocent passage for everyone. Beyond that would be space, not owned by anyone.

What remains to be done, and this would have to be done by an international conference, is to fix the heights of these various zones. It is likely that the first 30 miles will be considered absolute property. From there to 150 or 200 miles would be the zone where there is the right of innocent passage. Above that is ownerless space.

AMUSING TWIST

The amusing twist in such reasoning is that the ocean is ownerless too. Hence, over the ocean, outside the three-mile zone, ownerless ocean and ownerless space meet. Legally there would be no air over the ocean. So a ship bound for space, leaving England with course over Spain, should be more than 30 miles up when it crosses the Spanish coast line. If that cannot be done it should stay over the ocean, unless there is an Anglo-Spanish treaty about such things.

Now how about dropping a flag on the moon and claiming ownership that way? Law experts have not yet discussed this point specifically, but the drift of international law here on the ground, and especially as regards islands, permits a good guess how the law is likely to develop.

In the past it was usually considered sufficient if a sea captain came back and reported that he had sighted an island in such and such a position and that he had sailed around it and taken possession of it for His Majesty King Xavier XIII. Nowadays the International Court would ask first why he had failed to land. Then it would try to find out whether anybody else had landed. If somebody had, the act of taking possession from a distance would be declared without value.

ACTUAL HAPPENING

This has actually happened. Little Bouvet Island in the Antarctic Ocean was originally "annexed" for Great Britain by an English sea captain. The weather was so bad he did not land. More than a century later, sailors of a vessel flying the flag of Norway did land on Bouvet Island, planting their flag. The International Court took Bouvet Island away from Great Britain and handed it over to Norway.

But this is not quite the end of the story. England's men failed to land. Norway's men did. However, then they sailed away again. If somebody now lands there while the weather is bad (which is probable for Bouvet Island) and while nobody is looking (which is probable, too) and establishes a permanent colony, the island would be handed over to this nation, because Norway had "failed to enforce its sovereignty."

So if at some time in the future one nation should drop a flag on the moon and "annex" it, this would be an interesting gesture. But it would hold legal water only until somebody lands there and plants his flag or emblems in person. And even then the story is not really over, because another nation might establish a colony.

In reality the treatment of land outside the earth will probably take another course. It may be agreed upon that all such land is under the protection of the United Nations. Then, if somebody says that he has a good use for it, the United Nations will grant a mandate.

Make Sure A Prayer Is Sincere

QUESTION: I am sometimes asked to pray in public. This frightens me, and I wonder if it would be right to read a written prayer at such times?

ANSWER: There is no essential sin in reading a prayer. That should not be such a serious problem. The more serious problem is that of insincerity in praying whether the prayer is written or unwritten. Many persons who have facility in speaking can pray without a written prayer but are utterly without sincerity in their prayer. Do you not think that the same God who is able to answer prayer is able to detect such lack of sincerity?

I know it is embarrassing to fumble for words before a gathered crowd, and a written note might help. The particular danger in such praying is that just because it is written, there is the constant danger of merely reading words. Make sure that your prayer is deeply sincere, the paper upon which it may be written is incidental. The Bible says that "A double-minded man is unstable in all his ways, let not that man think that he shall have anything of the Lord."

Alcoholism Stems From Many Causes

By DR. T. R. VAN DELLEN

The use of alcohol is not the only cause of alcoholism. There are many more facets to the problem, and until these are uncovered, we never will know why a small percentage drink too much and too long.

Personality, religion, social structure and family background play a role in the development of such traits as alcoholism, drug addiction, overeating, gambling and compulsive work habits.

Those who grow up in and accept a religion that does not sanction drinking seldom become alcoholics. That has led to the recommendation of religion as a solution to the problem.

Wine, beer and distilled spirits are anesthetics and depressants. They reduce the speed and accuracy of perception; slow down reaction time; and diminish tensions, anxieties and inhibitions.

Selden B. Bacon, professor of sociology at Yale, says these reactions have a different impact upon different personalities and every alcoholic has a different reason for drinking.

The most susceptible to alcoholism are shy, repressed individuals who harbor feelings of guilt. They may resort to alcohol in the late teens or early 20s or may go for years without drinking until their responsibilities mount as a result of marriage and parenthood or occupational or professional progress.

They are unable to handle situations calling for a more important role in the community without developing anxieties, and rely upon alcohol to see them through.

The values set by any society are important to its members. Those who follow its pattern and emerge with excessive feelings of anxiety, tension, guilt or inadequacy, behave differently from

"IT WAS A NICE TRY, BUT..." seems to sum up public opinion about competitive cars attempting to equal the styling and features of the Swept-Wing 58. They tried to get as low, but had to lower the roof to do it. (Less headroom, same high, boxy, cooped-up look.) Their windshields got smaller, while ours got bigger. Most of them still don't have Total-Contact Brakes to assure smooth, even, safe stops when needed. Nor do they offer push-button TorqueFlite, the proven automatic transmission, and Constant-Control power steering that works full time—not part time as some other systems do. And Dodge no-sway, no-dip Torsion-Aire is standard equipment. (Bus-type air springs offered by some cars cost well over $100.00 extra.) So compare all the 1958 models with Dodge. We think you'll agree: Other cars are catching on, but they can't catch up.
